The beautiful browns of dormant soil and last year's decomposing stalks and stubbles contrasted with the early spring yellow-greens of pushing tree leaves gives all true agricultralists hope for the beginning of a new planting season. The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service reported this week that Pennsylvania farmers intend to plant more acres of wheat, oats and hay in 1999. But they expect to plant fewer acres of barley, corn, soybeans, and tobacco. These expectations are right in line with the national figures. For example, farmers in the U.S. intend to plant 78.2 million acres of corn, down two percent from both the last two years. This would be the lowest number of planted corn acres since 1995. Nationwide, soybean projections are at 73.1 million acres. If realized, this would be the largest number of acres on record. Of special note to Pennsylvania tobacco farmers, reports show that southern Maryland-type tobacco acreage will be 27 percent less, and Pennsylvania seedleaf type tobacco will be down 31 percent from last year. This likely reflects the problems farmers have had in selling their crop for the last two years.

PMMB To Set Temporary Over-Order Premium Effective May

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) is to post a Class I over-order premium by April 15, although it may not be the final over-order premium.

The amount of the premium to be set is not yet known, but given the fact that the lowest premium suggested during two days of hearings this week was about $3 per hundredweight, it may well be within that range.

The current over-order premium is 50-cents per hundredweight.

The PMMB is a three-person oversight board of an agency that audits and licenses dairy sales activities within the state with the mission to protect the interests of consumers and milk producers.

The agency is to ensure that milk handlers are adequately bonded to cover their purchases of milk, and that producers are paid according to how their milk was used and that appropriate premiums are made.

Further, the PMMB has the authority to establish minimum retail and wholesale prices of milk, and establish over-order premiums on the sale of beverage milk produced, processed and sold, all within state boundaries.

The over-order premium applies only to beverage milk, considered a Class I use under federal definitions.

The purpose for such a premium is to ensure the instate availability of locally produced and processed beverage milk, which is the most perishable dairy product.

Since 1988, the PMMB has set an over-order premium, ranging from 30 cents to more than a $1 per hundred pounds of milk.

Caution Must Follow Antibiotic Use, On And Off Farm

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Human health advocates have been occupied with coming up with the answer to a belabored issue: what factors are making disease-causing bacteria develop resistance to standard forms of treatment?

Is the cause an overprescribed use of antibiotics in patients? Or, like many arguments put forward

Checkoff, Labeling, Price Reporting Topics Of Joint Beef Council Meeting

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

WYALUSING (Bradford Co.) — Beef cattle producers, dairy farmers, veal growers, and beef industry representatives from New York and Pennsylvania met at Taylor Packing company recently for a tour of the facilities and to hear the latest updates on issues facing those in the meat industry.

High on the agenda were discussions on the call for a referendum on the dollar per head checkoff, mandatory price reporting by packers, country of origin labeling for meats, and food safety.

Contrasting views were presented by Ken Taylor Jr., president of the American Meat Institute (AMI) and George Hall, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), specifically on the country of origin labeling and mandatory price reporting.

"The diversity of this industry is remarkable," said Hall. "There are many parts of this industry. All of us have our own vested interest. I think one of the things that we've got to do in this industry is that we've got to work together so that

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA.
APRIL 07, 1999

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was good on the no more than adequate supply of 3 pound and smaller sizes; slow on the ample and competitively priced larger sizes. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 45 to 59 cents. Trade sentiment was firm on the smaller sizes; barely steady to weak on the larger. In the parts complex, leg quarters and bone-in breasts were in short supply. Wings were under increased inquiry but were still adequate. Other cuts were fully adequate for a light and cautious buying interest

SOUTHEAST HEAVY LIVE HEN REPORT, APRIL 5, 1999. FEDERAL-STATE

Majority prices were unchanged, although the weighted average price trended lower when compared to a week earlier. Demand was only fair for fully adequate to ample offerings. Interest for finished product slowed with offerings at least sufficient for full trade needs. Market conditions were about steady, eventhough processors were very cautious and weak.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

Prices were lower on the larger sizes in Chicago, Boston, and New England. In Philadelphia, New York, and the Southern area, prices were unchanged to lower on all sizes. Elsewhere, prices were unchanged. The market tone was barely steady to mostly weak. Demand was generally light to moderate at best, best where continued feature activity enhanced retail movement. Supplies of all sizes were at least adequate to occasionally ample, except for the West coast, where regional offerings were noted as close. Breaking stock supplies were fully adequate from regular sources, and the undertone was barely steady to weak. Light type hens were ample for slaughter schedules.

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying interest was light and selective. Offerings remained irregularly available. Bone-in breasts and leg quarters were noted as short of immediate needs from nearby shipping centers. Other items were at least adequate for the generally cautious buyer. Retail and distributive movement continued to be below most expectations. Trade sentiment was mixed and irregular but was generally expected to improve.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids slightly lower but corn and soybean bids moved moderately higher. Wheat steady to 5 cents lower. Corn 1 to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 3 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents higher. Continued good growing weather and improved crop ratings kept wheat bids on the down side. Additional weakness stemmed from reports that Algeria bought 100,000 metric tons of French wheat overnight and rain is forecast for dry areas of China's wheat growing areas. Corn bids were higher, supported by two days of active export buying by South Korea, even though sales were not very large. Forecast are calling for rain in the Central Combelt areas over the next few days, also added strength. Soybean bids were lower midday but finished moderately higher on corns strength. Export sales continued nil again and reports of South American meal bought for late summer delivery, limited gains. Very slow farmer selling of corn and soybeans offered support to bids.

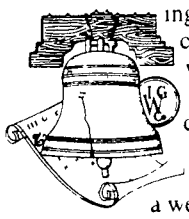
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

APRIL 12-18, 1999

JEFFERSON'S BIRTHDAY, APRIL 13.

OUR POLITICAL PHILOSOPHER

This spring, consider a visit to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, where architect John Russell Pope implemented Jefferson's own tastes in the Roman Pantheon-style building. You'll see marble from Vermont, Georgia, and Tennessee, and limestone ceilings from Indiana. Japanese flowering cherry trees are in bloom for just two weeks of the spring. The Memorial was authorized by Congress in 1934, completed through the National Park Service works, and dedicated in 1943. The building is open seven days a week, from 8 A.M. to 11:45 P.M.



. . . is uniformity of opinion desirable? No more than of face and stature. – Thomas Jefferson

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ A bit of vinegar in the dishwater helps clean up greasy dishes.

MOLE EGGS

Sauce:
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 small red pepper, chopped
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 cups chopped tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon fresh parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano
- 1 ounce semisweet chocolate
- chili pepper (optional)

- 6 small flour tortillas
- 6 eggs
- 8 ounces shredded Monterey Jack cheese

To make mole sauce, saute the onion and pepper in the oil, then add remaining sauce ingredients and cook 15 minutes. Preheat oven to 350° F. Place tortillas into a large oiled baking dish (or two smaller ones). Add 1/3 cup sauce to each tortilla, break an egg over the top, cover with cheese, and bake for 30 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Thunder in spring, cold will bring.

April 15 is called Swallow Day because swallows ought to appear on this date.

If it rains before sunrise, expect a fair afternoon.

OPINION

Food, the Ultimate Economic Power

The nation's producers for years have known that concentration in agriculture had permeated every notch of the food chain, affecting opportunities from production inputs to global trade. But according to Erika Hovland writing in the March issue of National Farmers Union News, a new study for the first time documents the highly complex web of relationships among the major players in the food sector, offering a glimpse into the future of the industry and the threat it poses to America's system of independently operated farms and ranches.

"When you look at the acquisitions firms make and their working relationships—joint ventures, alliances, side agreements—you see that a large number of these firms are connected to a lot of others and you say 'Now wait a minute. Just how much competition is there out there?' It certainly isn't what we think of as a lot of independent firms out there competing in the marketplace." said the study's author, Dr. William Heffernan, a professor of rural sociology at the University of Missouri.

The study shows how an explosion in the new types of working relationships among companies has led to the formation of a complex corporate family tree—a network of firms organized into "clusters" that control the food system from the gene to the supermarket shelf. The industry's three major clusters—Cargill/Monsanto, ConAgra, and Novartis/ADM—are loosely based on the same formula: they link interests in biotechnology, grain trading and processing, and meat production and processing to form a nearly complete food chain.

It's the sheer complexity of this emerging structure that raises red flags about the true degree of market competition in the industry. The elaborate nature of the relationships between firms reduces transparency, and means that even if a company does not hold a majority share of a specific market, it may still have great decision-making power within the food chain. It's that kind of penetration that makes the effect of the web of alliances so difficult to measure.

The ramifications of the emerging "cluster" system are far-reaching for producers, rural America, and for the nation's consumers.

"One of the most troubling implications is the threat to farmer's independence," NFU President Leland Swenson told lawmakers at a recent House Agriculture Committee hearing. "The dominance of a few major firms limits a producer's ability to earn a fair return. But the new structure also is bringing a major shift in decision-making from independent producers to just a handful of corporate executives," he said.

A related theme running through the study is how the new trend toward corporate "families" may transform the role of a producer from a manager into a laborer. And technological advances, such as the so-called terminator gene and precision farming, are accelerating this process. Biotechnology and the terminator gene have put farmers at the mercy of the "cluster" that patents the seed, leaving open the possibility that producers in the future may never even own the commodities they grow. Moreover, precision farming's global positioning system separates management from production by making it possible for "managers" in distant offices to make day-to-day decisions about the farm, while producers are simply hired hands.

But farmer's aren't the only ones who will feel the pinch. "Rural communities also lose out because corporate returns routinely are reinvested in the firm, rather than in local economies where the goods are produced," Swenson noted.

There are concerns that the movement toward a privately centralized food system may put U.S. food security in great jeopardy. "Congress needs to start asking the tough questions to determine what direction the industry should be taking, and whether it's wise to continue to allow consolidation to go on unchecked," said Swenson.

Some argue the proliferation of alliances, marketing agreements and partnerships between firms in agriculture is simply following a natural trend seen in other industries. But as Heffernan points out, "These are issues of food and not just agriculture and rural problems... Food is a necessity, and it is needed on a regular basis. Those who control the global food system have the ultimate in economic power."

To Recycle Pesticide Containers

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will collect pesticide containers for recycling. Containers must be cleaned before they will be accepted. During the months of May, June and July, farmers may drop off clean pesticide containers at locations in selected counties on certain dates.

All plastic pesticide containers must be triple rinsed or pressure rinsed and free of all visible products (inside and outside) in order to be accepted for recycling. Only HDPE#2 plastic containers will be accepted. All containers (55 gallons or smaller0 will be accepted whole.

Bulk tanks will be accepted only if cut in manageable pieces. Large drums and bulk tanks must also be triple or pressure rinsed in order to be accepted. Only plastic containers that held pesticides, crop oils, surfactants, sanitizers or fertilizer are acceptable. Other plastic containers (anti freeze, motor oil, laundry or dish detergents, milk bottles, etc.) will not be accepted.

Containers may only be dropped off at an open and attended site. The department will examine all containers at the drop off site. Unclean containers will be returned to the owner. For further information contact your county cooperative extension office or The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at 717-787-5206.

To Pay Yourself First

Adapt P.Y.F. (Pay Yourself First) as your new motto. Dr. Robert Thee, Lancaster County Extension Housing and Resource Management Agent, recommends you take ten percent of your take home pay each month and save it. The earlier you begin this practice, the sooner it will become a habit. Paying yourself first means you delay your satisfaction of meeting today's needs and wants and using these funds to satisfy tomorrow's needs and wants.

Paying yourself first means that. Before spending any of your income, a portion of it will be set aside for the future. The savings will grow into an investment fund in which money works for the family by earning interest, then the savings and interest earned is available to achieve future income.

To Start Saving

When it comes to saving money for the future, retirement saving usually is put on the back burner, and falls behind paying day to day bills and other big ticket items like replacing a car, according to Dr. Robert Thee, Lancaster County Extension Housing and Resource Management Agent.

But saving for retirement should begin as early as possible. Look at your household budget Can you trim your personal spending in order to save for retirement? Perhaps cutting back on eating out, buying clothes, taking vacations and paying for services you could do yourself will yield some dollars for savings.

Some people view retirement as a welcomed extended vacation, without money worries. But often retirees are faced with trying to make ends meet on an inadequate monthly income from Social security and their savings. The need to build your retirement nest egg is vital to give your investments adequate time to grow.

IS 'SEEING' 'BELIEVING'?
April 11, 1999

Background Scripture:
John 20:19-29
Devotional Reading:
Mark 9.14-24

I've always thought that the Apostle Thomas has gotten a 'bum rap' from many people who have judged him from the comfort and safety of 20/20 hindsight. Without justification, I believe, he has been saddled with that unfortunate sobriquet, 'Doubting Thomas' and held as a negative example of how not to respond to the Good News.

Then, in John 11:16, when Jesus resolves to go to Jerusalem, Thomas' response is one of both pessimism and intense loyalty and courage. In John 14:5, when Jesus assumes that the disciples know the 'way to the Father's house,' Thomas alone is humble and honest enough to confess that he doesn't know what Jesus is talking about. Are we to assume he was the only one who didn't 'know'?

Consider Jesus' reaction to Thomas on these two occasions. He was not angry, impatient or disappointed with Thomas. In fact, his expressed doubts gave Jesus the opportunity to clarify what he was saying. When, at last, Thomas does understand, he is one of the most loyal disciples

THE OTHER ELEVEN

We need to look at the other eleven apostles on the night when Jesus first appeared to them. Were they a group of fervent believers waiting for Jesus to appear? No, John tells us they were meeting behind locked doors "for fear of the Jews" (What fears put us behind closed doors?) They were in hiding when "Jesus came and stood among them and said, 'Peace be with you'" Having heard those words, did they jump up and greet him joyfully? John doesn't say that. Instead he says that Jesus then showed them "his hands and his side" "Then the disciples were glad when they saw the Lord" (20:20).

Notice, too, Jesus's message: "Peace be with you." Twice he says this because he knows that shattered by sorrow and despair, they have been without peace in their hearts (20 19, 21). Is that not what we often need to hear him say to us, too: "Peace be with you"? Most of the negativity that haunts my life comes from fear And fear often manifests itself as hostility, faithlessness, and despair. I have no quarrel with those who constantly pray to be saved from the Devil For me, it is enough to be saved from my fears. With Christ's peace in my heart the Devil doesn't stand a chance.

When Thomas enters the room where the rest are in hiding, they tell him, "We have seen the Lord." It is then that Thomas speaks those words that have marked him through the centuries: "Unless I see in his hands the print of the nails, and place my finger in the marks of the nails, and place my hand in his side, I will not believe" (20:25)

Once again Thomas is open enough to admit his doubts What the other apostles were asking him to believe was the very thing that up until his appearance before them they had not believed either! The consequences of this belief are profound: Jesus was crucified, buried, but he has risen from the grave and was here with us! That is so earthshaking in its implications that no one ought to accept it simply because someone else says "We have seen the Lord."

"UNLESS I SEE..."

Their experience can open the door and point the way for us, but each of us must be able to say with Thomas, "Unless I see... I will not believe." The resurrection of Jesus can mean nothing to any of us unless we too can say that in some way we also have 'seen' the Lord. The resurrection is too vital, of too great consequence, for us to accept it as a second-hand belief

Jesus appears to the apostles again, but this time Thomas is with them Instead of rebuking Thomas for his reaction to the report of his fellow apostles, Jesus invites him to actually touch his wounds. Note that John does not tell us that Thomas accepted Jesus' invitation. Apparently, without touching Jesus' wounds, Thomas now personally believes he too has seen the Lord and, quite unlike his fellow apostles on their first encounter with the risen Christ, he exclaims, "My Lord and my God!"

Still not rebuking Thomas, Jesus says. "Have you believed because you have seen me? Blessed are those who have not seen and yet believe" (20:29). We do not have to 'see' Jesus physically, but we do have to encounter him spiritually and, when we have, we join Thomas in proclaiming, "My Lord and my God!"

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

"THINGS STARTED TO CLICK"

The hills and wooded areas rise behind the beautiful Lonely Acre Farms' homestead along Friendsburg road west of Route 73 in the Oley Valley in Berks County. For more than 150 years the Hoffman family has farmed the soil here and milked Holstein cows on these fertile fields and meadows with a winding stream.

Today, Barry and Karen Hoffman and children Dwight, Sherry, and Kris, represent the 4th and 5th generations of the Hoffman family to call this farm home. A very down-to-earth commercial dairy operation, they milk 72 black and white and red and white Holsteins, and have about the same number of replacement young stock.

They farm 330 acres to raise the forages to feed the cows, and they raise a lot of soybeans for grain. Their desire to better utilize their homegrown soybeans attracted the Hoffman family to Purina feeds about 16 months ago, and the rest is history.

"We wanted a feed supplier that would help us to use our own beans to reduce the bought short-feed we needed to buy," Barry said. "At the time we were at the 17,800 lb. average milk production level and looking to reduce feed cost. We were also looking to increase milk production.

"Kevin Guldin, farm consultant for Oley Valley Feed, came up with the idea to process our beans and mix them in a 50% beans/50% Purina RB30 concentrate that gave us a feeding program that not only balanced our homegrown forages, it also reduced our bought concentrate by 50 percent."

Over the period since switching to Purina, the Hoffmans have increased production by more than 2,000 pounds of milk. Their rolling herd average is now pushing 21,000 pounds of milk and individual records go to 29,944m 1,032f 980p. Last month nine cows were milking over 100 pounds.

The operation is rather old-fashioned in its setup. The forages are fed in a bunk feeder in the loafing area, and the concentrate is fed in the stall barn at milking time. By the Hoffman's own admission, its not a fancy operation, but it is cost efficient with a special effort to watch the bottom line.

"After we started using Purina's feeding program, things started to click," Barry said. "The cows really like the feed and if you take it away, they don't want to eat anything else. Sure, we recommend Purina feeds to others, It works for us. We certainly are not looking to change feeds now."

Fortunately, it will never get a chance to earn its wings.

Scientists call it metamorphosis. Corn farmers call it trouble. Before they grow into moths, cutworms can devastate a corn stand. Stop them with a preemergent application of Pounce® 3.2 EC insecticide from FMC. Nothing controls cutworms better. And it has a new, lower price, so nothing costs less or is more effective. Ask your dealer or custom applicator about Pounce today.

United Ag Services Leaders Discuss Business

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — 1998 was a period of continuing growth for United Ag Services, according to Robert Nichols, United Ag president, during a recent annual meeting in Seneca Falls, N.Y.

United Ag Services is a federation of dairy cooperatives that provides management, marketing, accounting, administrative reporting, and employee and producer payroll to the member cooperatives.

The federation also makes these services available to other small to medium size businesses both agricultural and non-agricultural. United also provides these services to individual farmers to help them better manage their businesses. Member cooperatives are located in New York and Pennsylvania.

Nichols reported that although growth in memberships and member milk volumes did not quite meet goals, the management and accounting services to other businesses improved. In spite of the current downward trend in the dairy industry, the programs available to members have helped them stay competitive, he said.

Nichols, of Addison, N.Y., is also president of Addison Milk Producers Cooperative, an affiliate of United Ag Services. He and his family maintain a herd of 80 cows and youngstock and also produce maple syrup. The family farm was started by his father several years ago. His father was a former president of Addison Co-op, but has since retired.

James Patsos, CEO of United, discussed current economic conditions. With a strong national economy predicted to continue with moderate growth this coming year, the market for dairy products should remain strong, he said, adding that the price enjoyed by dairy farmers the past few months will see significant downturns in the coming months.

Overall he said dairy farmers should see prices below 1998, but not at the disastrous level of 1997. Therefore, he said, it becomes increasingly important that dairy farmers enlist the aid of their Congressmen to get the necessary legislation passed which will allow New York and Pennsylvania to join the Northeast Dairy Compact.

The Compact will act as a safety net for dairy farmers while not appreciably increasing the retail price of milk for the consumer, he said.

Patsos also stated that United was acquiring new, faster computers to assist them in their continued effort to better serve their members and customers. United is Y2K ready, he said.

He also announced a new initiative to help reduce members operating costs through the service's DairyImpact program. DairyImpact is designed to reduce the cost of input, both in feeds and supplies, through a group buying effort. Volume buying allows for discounted prices.

Guest speaker Peter Fredricks, agriculture economist for the Federal Milk Market Administrator, discussed pricing mechanisms under the present Federal Order 2 system. He also gave insight into the new pricing system being developed by the USDA and Secretary Glickman.

The proposed rules are to be implemented by Oct. 1. There is to be a review by Congress and, if approved, producer referendum during this period. Producers, through their cooperative or individually, are to vote on the proposed changes. A negative vote would result in the discontinuance of the federal orders.

Following the annual meeting, the board of directors re-elected Nichols as president; Douglas Stewart, Rome, Pa., vice president; and Leslie Gilbert, Pitcher, N.Y., secretary/treasurer.

Caution Must Follow Antibio

by some in universities and human health advocate agencies, by the use of antibiotics in poultry, which already takes careful, scientifically approved measures to regulate these procedures?

Dr. Sherrill Davison, assistant professor in avian medicine and pathology at the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center, spoke about these issues during the first of a two-day Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference.

Davison spoke Tuesday afternoon to more than 100 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Simply put, what human health physicians and poultry veterinarians prescribe are antibiotics or antimicrobials.

Antibiotics are produced by bacteria to kill disease-causing organisms. Antimicrobials are defined as antiobiotics or synthetic compounds that serve the same purpose.

Davison spoke about not only the controversy surrounding the issue of bacteria resistance but the fact that of what the poultry veterinarian can use, there is very little, she said.

The controversy, Davison noted, is: does antimicrobial use in food potentially affect human health? Do the resistant bacteria that can develop get into the human food chain?

According to the poultry veterinarian, advocates of the USDA/FDA-approved use of antimicrobials note there is "no scientific evidence" that the resistant bacteria show up in humans as a result of using antibiotics or antimicrobials in poultry.

However, she noted opponents of the use of antimicrobials in poultry can provide "lots of scientific evidence."

Part of the problem may be too many physicians, under pressure from their patients, don't judiciously prescribe antibiotics. Because the patients insist, doctors are forced to use antibiotics wrongly to treat viral infections. This "overprescription" of antibiotics in humans could point to why bacteria are becoming more resistant.

Physicians need to educate people about the proper use of antibiotics, to treat bacterial, not viral, infections. Human health professionals must become more aware of this. Poultry health experts need to do a better job of convincing people of the need for antimicrobials and antibiotics in animals.

"What we need to do is preserve the antimicrobials we have," Davison said, before the pressure becomes too great from those who are uneducated about the benefits and wrongly convinced of their dangers. And she said we need to find ways to prevent the overuse of antibiotics in people. Also, antimicrobials in cats and dogs continues to be widely used, but little is known about how human health can be effected.

Antimicrobials have two uses in poultry and livestock in general:

- Subtherapeutic measures or as growth promotants. These are used in low levels to prevent disease while promoting an animal's growth.
- Therapeutic uses to treat current flock disease include the use of the antimicrobials at the appropriate dosage and in the correct time period.

Veterinarians need to make "judicious and prudent use of antimicrobials at the therapeutic level," said Davison.

To prevent disease and to allay the public's fears of the use of antimicrobials in poultry, the American Veterinarian Medicine Association and European Union have come up with the following guidelines:

- Disease prevention through a properly managed poultry hygiene and vaccination program.
- The development of a working veterinary/client relationship. Producers should consult with a flock health provider.
- "Know what we are treating for," said Davison. Often some veterinarians see an increase in mortality and are too quick to start antimicrobial use.
- If using antimicrobial, select a "narrow-spectrum" compound, not simply a "shotgun" type preparation that treats bacteria not present.
- Treat for the appropriate time period. Note withdrawal times. Consult with the producer to establish effectiveness of the recommended treatment.

Davison advocates the use of preventative measures such as overall poultry health to stop disease, rather than relying solely on therapeutic methods.

For poultry producers, it is important to follow quality assurance programs, such as the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program, and Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point (HACCP) programs already in processing plants to stem disease.

The industry as a whole does "follow good, preventative methods to decrease problems," Davison told those who attended the conference. But methods of preventing disease with other methods other than antimicrobials are necessary to secure their use at a future time. It has been suggested by some that, in the future, birds should be subject to the use of antibiotics on a tightly controlled, prescription-only basis.

Concern about resistance should be "everybody's responsibility," said Davison. "I think the poultry industry does a good job in preventative measures." And the industry as a whole must do a better job in educating the general public. Consumers need to prepare food properly, use antibiotics if prescribed for the right reasons, and "preserve the usefulness of antimicrobials for the future," she said.

On Tuesday, a wide range of additional industry topics were also addressed.

Operations Research

More than ever, poultry producers are looking at ways to use a scientific approach to their management decisions.

Universities have a name for that discipline. It's called "operations research," in which the tenets of science and technology meet as a tool for producers to sharpen their feed formulations, hone amino acid prediction and disease diagnosis, and find ways to improve animal and facility efficiency.

In fact, according to Bill Roush, Penn State associate professor of poultry science, the tools of operations research have become so exciting to the industry that Penn State itself recently introduced a new animal science program which offers masters and doctorates in operations research.

Penn State itself has come out with new computer software, Pennfeed, which is a stochastic, nonlinear program to formulate a feeding regimen. The computer program literally takes a dozen or more feed ingredients and estimates the approximate price of the formulation.

Roush demonstrated certain aspects of the operations research program to those who attended the conference Tuesday morning.

Operations research was born during World War I, when Thomas Edison began using statistical technology to look for submarines.

Operations research was used in World War II by England to detect submarines surrounding the island.

Many types of techniques used in business grew out of operations research, including statistical analysis, inventory control, linear and non-linear programming, forecasting, risk analysis, networks, game theory, and others. Businesses use these tools commonly, including American Airlines for defining crews and rates, Walt Disney for determining occupancies of waiting lines, and the telephone companies to coordinate telephone calls.

Today, operations research has grasped new technology, including neural net capability, fuzzy set theory, chaos theory, and other computer-age marvels.

A common use of operations research includes the use of programming tools in feed formulation. Several make use of stochastic nonlinear programming, a way to provide a feed formulation method to meet animal requirements with measured certainty. A "recipe" is introduced of various amino acid and other ingredients and a value, or price, is then produced of that formulation.

Burgeoning technologies include neural networks. They can determine the efficiencies of amino acid combinations in feed.

Neural networks are present in most new cars, as the diagnostic system, and in airports, to detect explosives.

Safety Systems

According to a safety consultant, 90 percent or more of accidents that happen at a workplace can be linked to an unsafe act, either by an individual or to an individual.

Rich Galutia, senior consultant with J.W. Safety Management Company, spoke about safety in general, in addition to the topic of fire safety in poultry houses.

Many of the reasons for accidents can be blamed on simple human error. In the minute-by-minute decisions made by managers and employees, sometimes "you lose focus, you don't pay attention to what you're doing," said the consultant, and accidents occur.

Some companies can excel at their safety records. Galutia knows of one that went through five million personnel hours without a lost-time injury. One worked less than 100,000 hours and experienced nine lost-time accidents.

Galutia's company stresses the ABCs of safety, an acronym for Attitude, Behavior, and Control.

The right attitude can be the starting point of "everything" in safety, Galutia noted. That attitude includes being focused and alert, "paying attention," he said, to all aspects of safety during a task. He gave an example of a logging company where three workers, in order to unjam a drum "debarker," turned off the machine but didn't lock it out and communicate what they were doing to an operator who, unknowingly, didn't realize they were in the machine. When the switch was flipped, all three workers were killed.

"What possessed them not to lock it out?" said Galutia.

Regardless, the company clearly communicated the safety procedures and was found not at fault. A proper attitude about safety will "save you money, save you time, and save your life," said Galutia.

The second factor, behavior, needs to be placed in the same category as simple common sense. "The guys who went into the drum violated a company rule and exercised poor judgement," and the company wasn't fined, according to Galutia.

The final factor, control, includes taking the steps to locking out and tagging out equipment to prevent accidents. Also, these need to be communicated properly to the operator.

"Peace of mind comes from controlling hazards," said Galutia.

In a video about "wakeup calls," Galutia noted that many near-misses are signs of an impending accident. Wakeup calls should be treated and documented as accidents — and proper steps need to be taken to work proper safety procedures in to avoid actual accidents.

For fire control, it is important to isolate three important factors: oxygen, the ignition source, and fuel source. Any piles of wood, flammable liquids, or gases should be kept separate. No open flames from cigarettes or matches should be near these sources. Electrical wiring should follow proper safety installation guidelines. Watch for splits on equipment electrical cords.

Good housekeeping practices, in terms of keeping wood and other debris away from the houses, will go a long way.

Galutia spoke about the different types of fires, about proper respiratory protection, and other factors about poultry house safety.

Also speaking at the conference Tuesday were Doug Goodlander, Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission; Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, who spoke about odor studies and burgeoning developments; and David A. Pyle, DVM, with Bayer Agriculture Division, on a review of current antibiotics, their effectiveness, and future.

Dairy Co-ops Merge

RESTON, Va. — A merger between two Southern dairy cooperatives — Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers and Carolina-Virginia Milk Producers — was recently announced.

The merger was overwhelmingly approved by voting membership of both cooperatives and the new operations began April 1 under the name of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc.

Its headquarters is to remain in Reston, Virginia, and it is to maintain a regional office in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The merged cooperative is to market 3 billion pounds of milk produced by 1,550 members in states ranging from Pennsylvania to Alabama.

Robert Shore was to assume the position of general manager, following the expected retirement of George Walgrove, who served for 15 years under the former Maryland and Virginia cooperative.

According to a news release, the reasons for merging include additional milk marketing opportunities, increased operational efficiency, and expansion of financial base.

The news release also stated that Carlonia Virginia Milk Producers Association had an 80 percent Class I use of its milk. Class I is generally the highest paying use of milk.

While not elaborating on the uses of milk in the Maryland and Virginia cooperative, the news release stated, "Maryland and Virginia has a historical record of high returns from successful division and plant operations."

Twenty-two directors are to serve on an interim board for one year.

Included in the 22 directors are Maryland and Virginia President Jack Hardesty of Berryville, Va., and Carolina Virginia President Clyde Daniels of Louisburg, N.C.

From Pennsylvania, directors are Kenneth Benner of Millerstown, Stanley Burkholder of Chambersburg, Steven Graybeal of Peach Bottom, Doug McCulloh of Mercersburg, and Richard Mosemann of Warfordsburg.

From North Carolina are Rex Bell of Statesville, Branson Coltrane of Pleasant Garden, Clyde Daniels, Dan Hunsucker of Conover, and Dwayne Myers of Jonesville.

From Georgia are Henry Cabaniss of Maxeys, and Tom Thompson of Eatonton.

From Maryland are Glenn Eaves of Woodsboro, Mehrle Ramsburg of Thurmont, Joe Schwartzbeck of Union Bridge, Harold Smith of Monkton, Carl Weaver of Fairplay, James Weddle of Hagerstown, and David Weitzer of Poolesville.

From Virginia are John Hardesty, W.W. "Monk" Sanford III of Orange, and Ken Smith of Remington.

Membership is also in West Virginia and Delaware. The cooperative businesses include Marva Maid; a milk processing division in Newport News, Virginia; a manufacturing division in Laurel, Maryland; and an equipment division in Frederick, Maryland.

Sun's Up, And So Are Dangers Of Skin Cancer

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Sun's up and it's intense, as growers prepare the ground for crops. Unfortunately for farmers, most "don't pay a whole lot of attention to the idea of sun protection," according to a skin cancer surgeon.

As a result, said Dr. Elizabeth M. Billingsley, a dermatology surgeon at The Milton S. Hershey Medical Center College of Medicine, "a lot of our patients have significant, significant damage of their skin and a much higher risk of skin cancer."

For farmers, exposure to the sun is a given. They work outside yearround. The constant sun exposure in spring and summer build up over a lifetime — and Billingsley sees them, as they age, develop skin cancer.

The damage, first in the form of a tan, is a sign of unhealthy exposure to the sun. While Billingsley noted that farmers can't be hermits and avoid the sun, they should learn to be "smart about it," she said. "Skin cancer is very, very common in farmers."

A lot of sun damage can be visible on the backs of hands and areas of the face and neck. The skin is rough, leathery, thickened, scaly, and often red and crusted. Same with areas of the face, especially the ears and neck. Farmers ride on tractors, and those hands are "out there getting beat by the sun all day long," said the dermatologist.

On a hot, sunny day, farmers do little if anything to beat the damaging rays of the sun.

Too late, they learn a painful lesson.

Billingsley has seen farmers, the majority older than 50, with skin cancer, though she has seen skin cancer on farmers in their 40s. Many non-farmers can be exposed very early in life to sun, develop sunburns, and increase their risk dramatically. Billingsley noted some in their 20s and 30s who come in for surgery to remove cancerous skin lesions that develop as a result of sun damage.

Who is at risk? Everybody, to one extent or another, noted the skin surgeon.

But people who are fair-skinned, red-haired, blue-eyed, with that "Celtic-Irish look," and people who simply don't tan well are much more susceptible to skin cancer.

"The ability to tan is somewhat of a protective mechanism but it is

The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry

You Can Make A Difference!

Guest Columnist: Jennifer Griffiths, Communications Assistant, The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry

Lancaster County, Pennsylvania is home to almost 5,000 farms, with an average farm encompassing about 85 acres of land In fact, the County ranks fourth in the nation in terms of number of farms. So, it shouldn't be surprising that The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry is one of the only U S Chambers to have a full-time Agriculture Service Coordinator on its staff But, it is surprising how this unique position began and the extraordinary ways it benefits both the Chamber and the community

The position evolved when The Lancaster Chamber's Agriculture Committee recognized a need to educate the non farm public on agricultural issues such as the economic benefits of agriculture and the effects of agriculture on the quality of life However, although the idea was there, funding was a little harder to create The committee, a group of agri-business leaders and production farmers-all Lancaster Chamber members, first funded the position with money donated by organizations and individuals. Today, the position is funded by The Lancaster Chamber and a grant from the Lancaster County commissioners

In a county where total agriculture receipts are over $7 million, The Lancaster Chamber truly believes that its Ag Coordinator is a strong asset, and it recommends that individuals in agri-business and production farming across the U.S. become involved in their local chambers of commerce.

The position enables the Chamber to be a strong advocate for agriculture across the county," said Jodie Rutt, The Lancaster Chamber's director of finance and operations

The Lancaster Chamber stays in the forefront of agriculture by sponsoring events such as the annual Agriculture-Industry Banquet, which honors farmers and agri-business with two awards, the annual Farm Financial Management School, which assists farm managers in making sound financial decisions through interactive education; and Family Dairy Days, which invites the community to learn about farming. Strong support for the events is evident by the community's involvement and the ag industry's support. In 1998, over 500 ag leaders attended the Agriculture-Industry Banquet and over 6,000 children and parents participated in Family Dairy Days.

The Chamber also encourages its ag members to become involved in Chamber sponsored groups such as the Small Business Group, which is designed for members with one to 99 employees. Since production farmers often are classified as small businesses, local Chambers' value-added plans also can be a great assistance to them.

For instance, The Lancaster Chamber offers an electricity program through a partnership with Pennsylvania Power & Light's EnergyPlus, which features great service, a competitive price, and a rebate on electricity purchases. To farmers, who use a lot of electricity, this can be a valuable advantage to a Chamber membership. Another benefit of membership is the Chamber's HealthCare Plan, which along with PO's, HMO's and PPO's also offers group dental insurance, group vision insurance, group life insurance, and group disability income The best part about the HealthCare Plan is that it is available to small businesses that, otherwise, may not be eligible for healthcare

Besides the value-added benefits of Chamber involvement, through the active participation of the Chamber's Ag Coordinator, farmers and agri-business organizations know the Chamber recognizes the importance of agriculture in Lancaster County's community and economic structure.

For more information on how to become involved in The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry, contact Sandy Brill, membership manager, at (717) 397-3531 Or contact your local chamber of commerce to see how it can benefit you

Industrial Hemp Growers To Meet April 16

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — A presentation to interest growers in industrial hemp production is set Friday, April 16, at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland, from 1 p.m.-4 p.m.

Farmers throughout the state are invited. Shawn Patrick House from the Lancaster Hemp Company will start the meeting.

Robert Rex, the North American fiber representative for Crane and Company, will answer questions about hemp farming practices and organization.

Jane Balmer, regional representative for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, will be on hand to answer additional organizational questions.

The presentation is free and open to the public. Seating is limited. Call (717) 399-8369 if you want to attend.

According to a news release submitted by House Monday, in June 1994 President Clinton signed Executive Order 12919 promoting "strategic commodities," and hemp was included.

Approximately 30 countries produce hemp for domestic or export use. Canadian farmers are producing commercially and exporting to the U.S. Twelve states are introducing 1999 legislation to utilize the crop.

For more information, call House at (717) 399-8369, Rex at (215) 487-3317, or Jane Balmer, (717) 653-5916.

Session To Offer Ways To Save Money Producing Beef Cattle

YORK (York Co.) — Area beef producers are encouraged to attend a beef meeting Tuesday, April 20, at the Hoss's Steak and Sea House in West York.

State Extension Specialist Dr. John Comerford will present "10 Simple Ways to Save Money Producing Beef Cattle" at the informational session. The meeting will begin with dinner on your own from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. followed by the program from 7:30 p.m.-9 p.m. Contact Lisa at the York Extension Office, (717) 840-7408, if you plan to attend, so that adequate seating arrangements may be planned in advance.

Beef producers are very familiar with the need to control costs in the beef enterprise. Profit margins are always tight and producers need to look at practical ways to save money without sacrificing production.

For greatest impact, cost control measures must be simple to implement practical ideas. This session will help you identify ways you can improve beef profitability through more effective cost control.

10,000 Friends Of Pennsylvania Announce Leadership

HARRISBURG, (Dauphin Co.) – Pennsylvania's largest grass-roots alliance - 10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania - announced an expanded leadership slate.

The organization is concerned with land use, preservation, and economic issues connected with sprawl development.

Well-kown Lancaster County Commissioner Terry Kauffman was recently elected chair of the organization at the first annual meeting, March 18.

Kauffman has long been actively working to reduce the impact of sprawl on Lancaster County, including advocating changes in legislation, municipal planning methods, and the use of growth boundaries. Kauffman has also served as Chairman of the County Commissioners Association of Pennsylvania, and is currently chair of the Smart Growth Committee of the National Association of Counties.

"Improving our decision-making about how we use our land is critical to the future of our commonwealth," said Kauffman. "We must work together to make decisions that are right for today - and for tomorrow. We must find ways to forge alliances among employers, farmers, builders, lawyers, architects, planners, teachers, advocates, landowners, and everyone else with a stake in the land. And we must have every level of government and the law firmly in support of the process and the results."

A leading Penn State professor and co-chair of Governor Ridge's 21 Century Environment Commission, Caren E. Glotfelty - will serve as the 10,000 Friends vice-chair. Glotfelty is Goddard Professor of Forestry in their School of Forest Resources.

"The strength of 10,000 Friends," said Glotfelty, "is its ability to mobilize leadership, expertise, and resources across the commonwealth to ensure healthy, livable urban and rural communites. The 21st Centry Environment Commission's recommendations and the governor's recent funding and policy initiatives provide an opportunity to address these issues in a significant way. These are issues that affect all of us, and 10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania wants everyone to be at the table."

10,000 Friends has three honorary co-chairs: Mayor Ed Rendell of Philadelphia, former House Speaker K. Leroy Irvis of Pittsburgh, and Thomas Hagen of Erie.

Joanne Denworth, Esq., former president of the Pennsylvania Environmental Council is to serve as president of the organization and chair its Legislative Task Force.

In addition to the leadership team, seven task forces are to focus on issues of land use and sprawling development.

10,000 Friends of Pennsylvania is a non-profit grass-roots alliance representing over 100 organizations across Pennsylvania with a combined membership exceeding 200,000 citizens.

Since convening in 1996, the organization has supported the development of new policies and legislation to improve land use laws; locate government buildings in downtown areas; reuse vacant brownfields properties; and change school construction funding policies to encourage reuse of older properties.

10,000 Friends recently commissioned a comprehensive statewide study to examine the costs of sprawl in Pennsylvania.

MD-VA Coop Holds Annual Meeting

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md - Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers coop is going to be a very different organization after this month, according to George Walgrove, general manager of the association.

"It will be stronger, an organization better able to cope with the future," Walgrove predicted recently at the 79th annual meeting of the coop held here at the Ramada Inn.

Walgrove referred specifically to the consolidation of Maryland and Virginia with Carolina Virginia Milk Producers Association, an alliance that becomes effective this April. Ninety-seven percent of the voting membership of Maryland and Virginia and 95 percent of Carolina Virginia members voted to approve the proposed consolidation last month.

The merger creates a coop that will effectively be positioned to take a more active role in securing Class 1 milk sales, according to Walgrove, an issue that takes on increased significance with the anticipated elimination of support prices at the end of this year.

The coop consolidation is also a step toward expanding the Class 1 milk base in the future,. Walgrove, said, and will enable the organization to supply customers with a more substantial supply of milk.

"We will not jeopardize the Class 1 customers that we have in the area," he assured producers, "The milk that will go south will go there in lieu of powder. We will continue to show our customers that we have strength."

The new coop will keep the name Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc. It will be headquartered in Richmond, Virginia, with a regional office in Charlotte, North Carolina, and will market milk for over 1560 producers in 10 eastern states.

Robert Shore will take over as general manager this month with the retirement of George Walgrove after 15 years with Maryland and Virginia. Shore has been assistant manager for the past eighteen months. Before coming to Maryland and Virginia, he was general manager of Carolina Virginia for thirteen years.

Shore shared policy updates with the group, and talked on Federal order reform, Class 1 pricing, and the new BFP.

"I'm afraid we're not going to like what we see in these areas," he said. Still, he told the group, he is excited and optimistic about the future.

"Our future in general is good. It's going to be about change We face the future with the right attitude and the right resources to be successful in the future," said Shore.

During the afternoon program Young Cooperator awards were presented and eight dairy operations were honored for shipping milk to the coop for 50 years.

The Outstanding Young Cooperator for 1999 is Teresa Pomraning of York County, Pennsylvania. Teresa and her husband Myron operate My-T Farm in Delta. They milk a mixed herd of 55 Holsteins, Jerseys, Ayrshires, and Guernseys, and raise about 50 replacement heifers. Teresa also runs a home-based income tax business and works at a local farm machinery dealership. The Pomranings have four daughters: Stephanie, Kimberly, Suzann, and Jessica. The Pomranings started farming 20 years ago, and have been milking for 19 years.

"I am very honored to be selected as Maryland and Virginia's Outstanding Young Cooperator," said Teresa," I am eager to represent Maryland and Virginia both locally and nationally, and hope that I can be an inspiration to other young producers."

Tim and Carol Motley from Chatham, Va. were named first runners-up and will attend the National Milk Producers Federation Young Cooperator Conference and annual meeting in Nashville, Tenn. in November.

Stephan Lethbridge from Union Bridge, Md. was selected second runner-up and will attend the National Institute on Cooperative Education in Snowbird, Utah in July.

Timmy and Tammie French from Woodstock, Va. and Ronnie and Cyndi Messick from Midland, Va. were named third and fourth runners-up, respectively, and will attend the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Young Cooperator Leadership Conference in Carlisle, Pa. in July.

Inducted into the "50 Year Club" were: Cardette Farm Partnership, The Carder Family, Culpeper, Virginia; Glebe Farm, Culpeper, Virginia; the Earhart family, Nokesville, Virginia; Gloria and Donald Toms, Frederick, Maryland; Enfield Farm, the Enfield family, Knoxville, Maryland; Orchard Crest, Inc., the Edwin Potts, Sr. and Edwin Potts, Jr. families, Purcellville, Virginia; Harvue Farms, John O. Hardesty and Son, Berryville, Virginia; and Lyle C. Tabb and Sons, Inc., Vinemont Ayrshires, Kearneysville, West Virginia.

Timmy and Tammie French, Woodstock, Va. were selected third runners-up. Their two sons are Tyler 1 1/2, and Tabb six weeks.

Ronnie and Cyndi Messick were forth runners-up. Their children are, from left, Stephanie 10, Eric 8, and Amanda 9.

Stephen Lethbidge, Union Bridge, Md., was selected second runner-up. He and his wife, Donna, have three children, from left, Allyson, 9, Collins, 5, and Brittany, 7.

Tim and Carol Motley, Chatham, Va, were named first runners-up in Maryland and Virginia's outstanding young cooperator contest. Shown with them are their three children, from left, Adam 17, Melissa 13, and Julie 6.

Sun's Up, And So Are Dangers Of Skin Cancer

not prevention," said Billingsley. "We see plenty of skin cancer in people who have been tanned all their life. But people who are fair-skinned are much more likely (to develop skin cancer) at an earlier age."

There are two common types of skin cancer:

• Basal cell carcinoma, a tumor which can appear as a small, fleshy bump or nodule on the head, neck, and hands. They are the most common skin cancers found in Caucasians. Untreated, the cancer will begin to bleed, crust over, then repeat the cycle. This type of cancer rarely spreads to other parts of the body but can extend below the skin to the bone and cause local damage.

The cure rate for both basal cell and squamous cell carcinoma is 95 percent when quickly and properly treated, according to medical literature.

A more deadly type of skin cancer is malignant melanoma, estimated to develop on the skin of 32,000 Americans annually. Every year, an estimated 6,800 of them will die from melanoma.

The good news: it's almost always curable in its early stages.

Excessive sun exposure is the culprit, and atypical moles, which may run in families, can serve as markers, identifying the person at being at higher risk. Dark skin is not a guarantee against melanoma. Warnings signs include changes in the surface of a mole; scaliness, oozing, bleeding, or the appearance of a bump or nodule; spread of pigment from the border into surrounding skin; and change in sensation, including itchiness, tenderness, or pain.

There are some early signs of the less deadly skin cancers, such as the squamous cell. One sign is the appearance of what dermatologists call "actinic keratosis," or AKs for short — rough, red, scaly patches due to exposure to sun damage. It's a precursor, noted Billingsley — it can develop into cancer if left untreated.

How does Billingsley treat the cancers? AKs are treated much like a wart. They are frozen using liquid nitrogen. Basal or squamous cells are removed by treating the skin area with a local anesthetic, such as lidocaine, and then cutting or scraping it off.

Cancers in certain locations, lesions that have been treated in the past or are large, may require a more involved surgical procedure, Billingsley noted. Mohs surgery, also performed using a local anesthetic, has a higher cure rate in these cases.

Billingsley performs about 20 surgeries a week, some of them farmers. All are done as an outpatient service.

She also provides information to transplant patients, who, because of their treatments as a result of the transplants, are at a higher risk of developing skin cancer.

"Prevention is critical," she said.

Here's a guideline farmers should use when out in the sun:

• Wear a broad-brimmed hat, that covers the face and neck. A simple baseball cap is at least something, but offers minimal protection to the face and none to the neck. The ideal type has a flap that protects the neck as well as the ears. A baseball cap offers no ear protection. And Billingsley has removed large areas of cancer from patient's ears.

• Use sunscreen daily, with a minimum protection factor of 15 that blocks Ultraviolet A and B from the skin. Farmers should keep a bottle in the tractor cab and reapply frequently. Also, use a lip balm containing sunscreen, because skin cancer can occur in the lips.

• Wear long-sleeved shirts to protect the arms. Billingsley understands that with high temperatures and humidity, this may be improbable — if so, many sunscreen products resist sweat and can last a long time, some with eight-hour protection.

Billingsley noted that many people from every walk of life are developing skin cancer. She sees people who are sunbathers and vacationers who get a lot of sun exposure.

A tan is a response to ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

"It is a sign of sun damage," she said. People should not try to purposefully tan.

"Tanning booths are also a source of dangerous radiation," said Billingsley. "The idea that tanning booths provide a safe tan is wrong."

But she continues to see a lot of farmers who don't understand the risks of sun exposure.

"I don't know of any farmer who started using sun protection and then stopped," she said. "I think a lot of them just don't think about it. It's not a high priority. But once they show up and start getting treated for it, the majority of the damage is done.

"But doing some protective measures at that point is not a waste."

For those who want a tan, there are self-tanning creams available that are practically waterproof, are safe to use, but need to have sun protectant included in them. They are made to look even more realistic than in the past.

For farmers, starting protective measures at a young age can "possibly minimize the expression of all the damage and maybe decrease some skin cancers from actually forming. So you can make a difference."

PMMB To Set Temporary Over-Order Premium Effective May

Hearings on the premium held Tuesday and Wednesday this week were done in response to a sharp decline anticipated in the price of milk paid to dairy farmers.

For months last year, and into the first couple of months this year, the price of milk paid to all dairy farmers was the highest ever, at least $4 above historic trends. Last year is considered the best year ever for dairy farmers.

Even though dairy farmers and industry specialists in December and January had anticipated a decline (or correction) in the price of milk to dairy farmers, the actual drop went below expectations, and is set to be about $2 below historic trends. The low prices should be experienced by dairy producers when they receive their milk checks for the month of April.

Overall, milk is valued according to a formula prescribed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The resultant value is commonly called the Basic Formula Price (BFP). The formula price accounts for the market values of dairy component products, especially cheese and butterfat, and then sets an overall value for milk.

The value of beverage, or Class I, milk is set by a "Class I differential" which is different for different areas. The differential takes into consideration distances from markets, and other considerations.

When the market price of cheese, for example, decreases, the BFP decreases and the price of milk paid to farmers decreases. When the price of cheese increases, the price of milk paid to farmers increases.

Earlier this year, the price of cheese dropped significantly. That decline portended a sharp decline in the price of milk to farmers and stimulated a petition of the PMMB to hold a hearing to consider changes to its over-order premium.

Following two days this week of sometime contentious discussion about the plight of dairy producers in Pennsylvania, costs of milk production, etc. by a number of parties interested in the dairy industry in Pennsylvania, the PMMB, chaired by Beverly Minor, stated it would post an order (premium) quickly, although it didn't want that premium to be considered final, until receiving legal briefs from the attorneys who represented the various interests during the hearings.

Transcripts of the hearing were to be available to the PMMB and parties by noon April 9, past press deadline. Additonally, the prepared written testimony supplied by the different testifying parties was not in adequate supply and copies were only to be made available too late for reporting this week.

Nevertheless, the final decision of the board on Wednesday was that it would post a premium by April 15 so that the industry would have enough time to adjust by May 1 and so that dairy producers would receive benefits in their May milk check.

Producers' April milk checks are expected to show losses reflecting the sharp decline in cheese prices.

The special premium-setting arrangement was agreed to by parties on Wednesday at the suggestion of representatives for independent milk dealers.

It was suggested that, since attorneys requested reasonable time to compile and submit to the PMMB legal briefs in support of their testimony and the delay would defer the ability of Pennsylvania dairy farmers to receive premiums to offset anticipated losses, the board issue an "interim" premium.

It was pointed out that the board may not technically have the authority to set an actual "interim" premium. In light of that, the board is expected to announce a non-permanent "final order."

Any party disastified with a "final order" by the board has 15 days to file an objection with briefs for consideration by the board.

The board then is to rule on the objection within 20 days.

Since a premium is to be announced by April 15, and attorneys who testified are to be given until April 30 to submit briefs supporting their testimony, the rules covering the 15 day limit on objecting to the premium complicated things.

Therefore, the attorneys and the PMMB essentially reached an agreement whereby a premium would be announced by April 15 to give the dealers and retailers a necessary two weeks to respond to implement the premium; briefs would be filed by the end of the month, and any rebuttal briefs to objections filed would have to be submitted by May 5.

Though not complete, in general the PMMB was asked to:

- Consider setting a moving premium that would be based on the floor price set by the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact ($16.94) minus the Class I adjusted BFP at Boston. (If the BFP were, for example, $13.44, the Pa. over-order premium would be $3.50)
- Consider setting a moving premium based on the low BFP of $10.27 with a 50-cent plus 2.50 over-order premium. The premium would automatically change, penny-by-penny, with changes in the BFP.

In other business, in a regularly scheduled meeting of the PMMB following the hearing Wednesday, the board was asked by the dairy cooperatives and Pennsylvania Farm Bureau to consider pooling of the premium, so that all dairy

USDA Changes FMMOs, Classes, Provisions, Eliminates BFP

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As part of the reformation of the USDA federal milk marketing order program going from 31 federal orders to 11 federal orders, the basic formula price is going to change as well.

It is too soon to determine what effect the changes will have on the dairy industry and related industries.

According to a summary of the changes scheduled to take effect Oct. 1 this year, the BFP is to be replaced with a component price formula to establish values of Class III and Class IV milk uses, which are manufacturing uses.

Some minor reclassification is scheduled as well.

Eggnog is to now be considered a Class I product, along with the current products of drinking milks, butter milk and flavored milks.

Class II products are ice cream, yogurt, cottage cheese, and cream. Most cheeses and butter are Class III. Class IIIA is nonfat dry milk.

The change is to eliminate the Class IIIA label and make it Class IV, while adding butter and and any milk product in dried form.

According to the USDA summary, "The final decision replaces the BFP with a multiple component pricing plan that continues the tie between the price of milk used in fluid products and the price of milk used in manufactured products.

"The current BFP serves two purposes — it is the Class III price and it is the price mover for Class I and Class II. The replacement for the BFP will split these two functions.

"The Class III and Class IV prices will be based on multiple component pricing using monthly average commodity prices to compute the component values. Multiple component pricing involves determining a value for milk, based on the values of protein, butterfat, and other nonfat solids used in manufactured dairy products."

The summary also states that the method of setting a Class I price will be very similar to the current method; a Class I differential is added to a "base price," instead of the BFP.

The base price is to be announced on or before the 23rd day of each month and is to use the most recent two-week estimate of the Class III or Class IV price for milk used in manufacturing, whichever is higher.

Class I differentials are to be added to this base price.

(The use of the most recent two-week average of prices was selected in order to reduce the time lag in setting Class I prices, relative to manufactured dairy product prices.)

The USDA National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) currently surveys and reports block cheese prices for use in calculating the BFP.

NASS also surveys and reports transaction prices for barrel cheese, butter, dry whey and nonfat dry milk. All of these products are to be used to derive the manufacturing price, and to calculate the factors for determining the Class I differentials.

The estimated costs of producing dairy products, called the "make" allowance, is to be deducted from the commodity prices surveyed by NASS in order to derive a representative price based only on the value of the components in milk used to manufacture cheese, butter, nonfat dry milk and dry whey.

It is explained in the USDA summary that the reason for replacing the BFP is, "There is widespread agreement in the industry that the BFP needs to be replaced.

"At one time, a signficant amount of Grade B milk was pro-

farmers in the state would enjoy the benefit, not just those who produce milk that gets used for Class I purposes.

The board rejected the request, stating that until the issue of the Northeast Dairy Interstate Compact, due to expire Oct. 1, was finalized, as well as the implementation of the new USDA federal milk marketing orders (which would lump Pennsylvania in with the New England states) set to be in effect by the end of October, it would not pursue an inquiry of pooling.

The effect of the restructuring of the federal milk markets as well as the final disposition of the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact could make pooling a moot issue, and there are already many other issues of concern requiring attention.

Following the meeting, representatives of dairy cooperatives called attention to an error in an announcement about the PMMB hearing published in the March 27 issue of Lancaster Farming. It was stated that dairy cooperatives collect the over-order premiums and distribute it equally among all members of the national cooperatives.

Cooperative representatives on Wednesday said that was not true — the premiums do not get shared nationally, but are instead shared by all members within the cooperatives' regional operations.

duced, and the majority of it was produced in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Since Grade B is unregulated by federal orders, because it is not eligible for fluid use, it was considered representative of competitive market conditions that would prevail in the absence of a federal milk order program.

"Today, less than 5 percent of all milk produced is Grade B milk. As the supply of Grade B milk has dwindled in Minnesota and Wisconsin, as well as nationally, the BFP is becoming out-of-date as a statistically valid indicator of a competitive market for milk."

Class I Pricing

Also in a summary, the USDA stated that there will be a change in Class I pricing.

According to the USDA, "In each milk marketing order area, the Class I price is the minimum price that regulated handlers (those who receive farmers' milk) must pay for milk used in fluid products (beverage uses and creams) called Class I milk.

"Like Class II and Class III prices, producers do not receive Class I price directly, rather, they receive a weighted average, called the blend price, which represents the volume and price of all milk in the marketing order area used in (each of the different classifications of milk use).

"Under the current program, Class I prices are announced each month for the following month, as the sum of the BFP for the previous month, plus a stated Class I price differential.

"Since the BFP is the same for every milk order, most discussion of Class I prices focus on the Class I differential, which varies across milk marketing orders.

"Class I differentials vary across federal order for two reasons. First, there needs to be a price incentive to move Grade A milk from points of production to fluid milk processing plants, which are typically located closer to population centers than to production areas.

(Turn to Page A38)

As of this week, the nation's trading houses, such as the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, which trades future's contracts and related trading devices based upon the BFP have not decided and/or stated how they intend to alter their trading to reflect the USDA's announced changes.

However, the USDA's Dairy Options Pilot Program — a program designed to educate and encourage dairy farmers on the use of trading tools to protect against cash flow losses — is dependent upon the BFP.

As of presstime, it was still unclear what changes would occur with regard to BFP futures and related put options.

According to Jim Graham, with the agricultural commodities program of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the CME has BFP futures contracts extending out to January 2000, and the contracts for October and beyond are already carrying the caveat that they are to reflect either the BFP or an equivalent.

He said the announced changes by the USDA have not seemed to affect trading on those futures contracts, as most of the activity has been concentrated on nearer month contracts.

As of now, he said it is still too early for the CME to state how contracts will change, if at all.

He said the industry is still attempting to digest the language of the USDA announcement and make decisions on how it will be reflected in commodity trading.

Forage Soybean Licensed from USDA

HALL, N.Y. — Seedway, headquartered her since inception in the early 1970s, announced Donegal forage soybean has been licensed by the company from the USDA Agricultural Research Service. Donegal, the product of 19 years of breeding, was developed by geneticist Dr. Thomas Devine based at the ARS Weed Science Laboratory in Beltsville, Md. Additional support in development and testing was provided by Elwood Hatley of Penn State, David Starner of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Bub Lucey and Jerry Cherney, Cornell University.

Expanded testing began in 1996 when seed was shipped to several co-operating state agriculture experiment stations Last year 19 stations across the U S. participated.

Donegal demonstrated good dry matter yield, up to six tons per acre, exceeding conventional grain varieties by up to 75 percent. Additional benefits include high nutrient composition, good palatability, and potential as an ecologically useful tool to deplete soil phosphorus levels where animal manures and regularly applied in the cropping rotation

Exceptional vigor and continued growth late into the season after other soybeans stop growing sets it apart for forage applications in the northern half of the U S.

all segments can make some money. Currently the issues that we face as producers and as packers, as feedlot operators and veal producers, all have a common thread that runs through them, and that's the product that we produce called beef or veal."

Checkoff dollars support research, promotion and product development. A vote on the checkoff would solely be a vote to continue the checkoff or discontinue the checkoff.

"This is a significant thing," said Hall, "We won't vote to modify the checkoff. It doesn't work that way. This would be a yes or no vote. What we're trying to do now is find out what changes (producers) want to make. You as livestock producers or packers, whoever you may be, we're going to go to the secretary of agriculture and try to make changes, but we need to know what they are."

One change that has been suggested is for packers to also contribute to the fund. Some packers, Hall noted, already contribute voluntarily.

Hall also commented that the vote would cost the industry more than $3 million, money that he thinks would be better spent on food safety and a variety of other areas.

"There are a tremendous number of improvements and a tremendous number of processes that have been made over the last few years, many of them funded by your checkoff dollars," said Hall.

One of the biggest benefits of the checkoff money, according to Hall, is that more than 30 new products have been developed in the last two years.

"For most of the working people in this nation, the decision of what to have for dinner is made on the way home from work. And they're not going to go home and cook a shoulder or a pot roast that's going to take two hours. They want something that they can get home and in 15 to 30 minutes can be on the table."

Meat products are now available that people can pick up at the supermarket, on the way home from work, and have on the table in less than half an hour.

"We're meeting the demand of the American public," Hall noted.

He also pointed out that every producer has a say in how the checkoff funds are used.

"Really, it's your organization," said Hall. "Every one of you pays into the checkoff part, and those of you who are members pay your dues. Every state in the union is represented on the Cattlemen's Beef Board that authorizes how those checkoff dollars are used. If you don't like the way they're being used, find out who your representatives are and let them know."

Giving credit to continued promotion efforts and general industry improvements, Hall noted that for the first time in 20 years, the demand for beef has stabilized.

"Whether this is a trend, we can't tell in one year, but at least we didn't see a further reduction in the demand figure. After another year and hopefully as prices for our product continue to improve, we'll see an upswing."

He also gave credit to the veal growers for achieving a major turnaround in the industry.

"Not too many years ago the veal industry was just about to go under as an association. With some innovative restructuring, it is today a viable industry. I remember times in Oklahoma where you couldn't buy veal in even your upscale stores. Today you can find it about anywhere," said Hall.

Here, he added, is one particular area where advertising is making some real advances in getting the word out about veal.

The NCBA is a relatively young organization formed in the merger of the National Livestock and Meat Board and the National Cattlemen's Association. Already significant savings have been achieved through the combination of these two entities.

"The size of the staff has been cut about 20 percent at a significant dollar savings," said Hall.

In the future, the Meat Board offices in Chicago will be merged with the cattlemen's offices in Denver.

"That is going to take some time and there are a lot of things involved in it. We believe there's between 200 and 300 thousand dollars in operating costs alone that we can save every year in that process," Hall said.

Other issues which the NCBA is working on are estate tax changes, public lands administration, clean water initiatives, and beef safety research.

Hall also stated that the NCBA supports both country of origin labeling for meats and mandatory price reporting for the packing industry.

"We're working with the Congress for every state's legislation to get it done and to try to work it out so it's fair and as unobtrusive as possible. Certainly it is the packer who will have to provide the information to the industry whether it's through market news reports or other sources. The thought on it is that the more information that's available to livestock producers, the better decisions people can make in merchandising their animals," Hall said.

Speaking as the president of the AMI, Taylor contrasted Hall's points on mandatory price reporting and country of origin labeling. He also made an appeal for more food safety research.

"Certainly these are issues that are important to us as a regional packer serving those of you who are here. As far as mandatory price reporting, there seems to be a lot of political play on that item right now and I know there's some division within the NCBA. As a packer and representing the AMI, we're against mandatory price reporting for a couple of reasons. First there's a lot of voluntary price reporting today. We've estimated that about two-thirds of the live cattle sales are being reported and maybe three quarters of the finished product sales are being reported. We think that with the packers and the trade groups working with the NCBA, and the other constituencies, we can probably raise the level of price reporting voluntarily."

Taylor added that he hopes that this issue does not end up as a new regulatory issue.

As far as country of origin labeling is concerned. the NCBA contends that the United States has the safest food supply in the world.

"We need to say where it came from and have the assurance that this is a safe product before it is sent out," said Hall.

As a regional packer, Taylor noted that the company buys cows from their entire marketing area, which includes Canada. They also sell meat into Canada.

"When you get into country of origin labeling, you would have to have a complete animal ID system to track every animal that came in here so you know where it came from."

Taylor packing, through a computerized system, can track lots of ground beef to the specific lots from which it was produced, and also can track carcasses up until the point that they are broken

Entry Deadlines For Maryland Sheep, Wool Festival Set

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — Entry deadlines for the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival, scheduled here at the Howard County Fairgrounds May 1-2, have been set.

For the live animal and carcass contest, entry deadline is April 24. Lamb weigh-in is 1 p.m. Sunday, April 25. On-hoof judging is 2 p.m. the same day. Carcass judging is Tuesday, April 27 at 9 a.m. Consignors can inspect carcasses at Mt. Airy Locker the same day at 11 a.m. Results will be posted at the festival, in building 3, at noon Saturday, May 12.

The purpose of the contest is to recognize superior lamb production and to demonstrate to the sheep producer the more valuable characteristics of the lamb carcass and their contribution to improved sheep breeding through live animal evaluation.

The lamb must have been owned by the entrant for 45 days preceding the festival. Wethers, ewes, and rams of any breed or crossbreed are eligible for entry. On-hoof weight limit is between 80-125 pounds, determined at weigh-in April 25. All lambs must be completely slick-shorn within five days of the on-hoof show.

In addition, lambs are subject to all health rules and are to be free of drug residues. Lambs will be judged live and on-rail with final placings to be based on cumulative points (about 30:70, live:carcass). If enough lambs are entered, on-hoof judging will be divided into two weight classes. Final placing of the carcasses will remain the same — one class.

The grand and reserve champion and third-place carcasses will become the property of the fesital. All other lamb carcasses will be the responsibility of the owner. Cost of processing will be paid by the owner to Mt. Airy Locker when the meat is picked up. Mt. Airy Locker has offered to buy a limited number of carcasses, on an individual basis, according to their need.

Premiums total $847.50. Grand champion carcass premium is $250 and reserve is $200.

Mail information about the lamb, including lamb sex, birthdate, breed, and fee to Robert Dinsmore, 5842 Broad Run Rd., Jefferson, MD 21755. Include exhibitor name, address, city, state, zip code, and telephone number. The fee schedule: Maryland Sheep Breeders Association members are $10, others are $20. Make checks payable to Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival.

For the Club Lamb Jackpot, to take place Sunday at 11 a.m. in Barn 7, entry deadline is also April 24. Each exhibitor is limited to four lambs. Minimum weight is 60 pounds with five pounds tolerance — there is no maximum. All lambs must have approved interstate or Maryland health papers. Wether and ewe lambs will be shown in four classes divided by weight — no rams will be shown. Lambs must carry all lamb's teeth, they must be owned by the exhibitor, and an entry fee of $10 per head must accompany each entry form.

Weigh-in will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday, May 2. The show begins at 11 a.m. Lambs will be released immediately after the champion is selected.

Premiums are grand champion, $100 and reserve, $50. For both feeder lamb show and sale and the club lamb jackpot, out-of-state entries must meet interstate regulations and be accompanied by official interstate health certificates. A copy of the certificate must be forwarded to the animal health section prior to animal arrival: Maryland Department of Agriculture, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401. Mail exhibitor information to the Dinsmore address, included in this article, with checks payable to the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival.

FSA Announces Dairy Market Loss Assistance Program

LANCASTER, (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County USDA Farm Service Agency has announced the availability of the federal Dairy Market Loss Assistance Program (DMLA).

Producers qualify for the direct cash payments up to $5,000 if their dairy operation marketed milk commercially in the United States anytime during the fourth quarter of 1998.

Eligible dairy producers may receive a direct payment per hundredweight (cwt) on the first 26,000 cwt for milk marketed commercially from the dairy operation during the 1997 or 1998 calendar year.

Each dairy operation has a choice of using 1997 or 1998 calendar year milk marketings for the base period.

Producers who operate a joint dairy operation will receive a payment based on their share of the first 26,000 cwt marketed from the dairy operation.

The actual payment rate will be determined after signup and will be calculated by dividing the amount available by the total eligible cwt of milk from all approved dairy operations.

The application period for DMLA begins on April 12, 1999 and ends on May 21, 1999.

Persons representing dairy operations that were marketing milk during the fourth quarter of 1998 may apply for DMLA through USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) local offices.

During this signup period, producers will be required to apply for the program at their local FSA office.

Producers will be required to certify that the dairy operation was marketing milk during the fourth quarter of 1998.

FSA will have an application form that producers will fill out when they sign up for the program. The form will require producers to include the name of the dairy operation and a list of persons involved in it, and the 1997 or 1998 calendar year milk marketings of the dairy operation.

The form also will include a statement affirming that the dairy operation marketed milk during the fourth quarter of 1998, and a statement affirming that the producer is aware that USDA will be conducting spot checks.

For those dairy operations selected for a spot check, responsible producers must provide additional information as requested, such as milk marketing statements, fourth quarter of 1998 records, and name of the milk handler.

down. But they cannot trace specific cuts of meat or packs of ground beef to the specific carcass from which it came.

If country of origin labeling was introduced, you would have to keep all the meat separate when it was broken down and in grinds and blends, which doesn't happen today, Taylor explained.

The issues spill over into the retail market as well, where you would have to keep all the meat separate in packaging and labeling.

"When you add the government system that it would take to regulate this system, the AMI estimates that it would cost about $1 billion per year to manage all of this," said Taylor.

In regards to food safety, in particular research on E. Coli. bacteria, Taylor called for producers and packers to come together to solve the issue.

"If we can all get together on one issue, which would be to really apply our money and our manpower to the food safety issue and find a way to eliminate this E. Coli bug, hopefully in the live animal, as an industry, we'd be much further ahead than we are today," Taylor said.

AMI is raising funds to research E. Coli and also listeria.

"The producer groups are the ones who have the political capital, so we really need the participation and the cooperation of the cattlemen to deal with these issues, because it certainly affects the whole industry," Taylor said.

They're not just using POSILAC® to make the most out of today. They're using it to make the most out of tomorrow.

Dennis Egelston and his brother, Bill, are the third generation of their family to farm at Glen Meadows near Fultonville, New York. Continuing to operate the family farm is rewarding for the Egelstons. "We like the advantages of being our own boss," states Dennis. "We have a choice to get larger or better to improve our bottom line. We choose to use all the tools available that we think will make us more efficient and staying stagnant isn't one of them."

The Egelstons milk 70 registered Jerseys twice a day and have achieved a rolling herd average of 18,133 pounds of milk. Milking takes place in a 60 stanchion barn with a pipeline milking system. And each May, cows begin a grazing on an intensified pasture rotation.

POSILAC® 1 STEP™ is one of the management tools that help them make a profit. "For every dollar I'm spending on POSILAC, I am getting close to $3 in return," says Dennis. "Financially, it has helped sustain us from having to change our operation around."

Cows are holding production longer, too. "POSILAC is very easy to use and it's very easy to watch cows," reports Dennis. "If we didn't start using it five years ago, I doubt we'd be in the operation we are now. In some financially challenging times, we feel POSILAC has sustained us. It is very possible that without POSILAC, we might be doing something else."

5 years of helping dairy producers achieve their goals.

USDA

"However, federal orders also recognize that local milk prices should not exceed the cost of available 'distant' milk transportation costs to the 'local' market.

"The price incentive also persuades manufacturing plants to 'give up' milk and make it available for the fluid market."

The final decision uses a mix of two proposals that were considered in reforming the USDA policy.

According to USDA, "The final decision adopts a national price surface that meets fluid milk demand by generating sufficient revenue for dairy farmers. It also provides incentives for greater structural efficiencies in milk assembly and distribution. These goals are achieved by using generally higher differential levels as proposed in Option 1A, while retaining the pricing surface of the preferred option."

In order to understand the terms of the USDA in that explanation, it is necessary to be familiar with the two proposals made prior to the final decision.

However, according to the USDA, "Higher differential levels were selected for two important reasons.

"First, the higher differential levels assure that the minimum prices established under the system of milk marketing orders will generate sufficient revenue for dairy farmers so that there will be an adequate supply of fluid milk while maintaining equity among handlers.

"Second, the higher differential level will, together with reducing the lead time for announcing Class I prices, reduce the likelihood of inverse class-price relationships (something that happened in recent history), thereby sending better pricing signals to dairy farmers.

"Although the adopted pricing surface is at generally higher levels, it retains essentially the same relative pricing relationships as presented in an economic model of the dairy industry, the U.S. Dairy Sector Simulator."

According to the USDA summary, the effect is to move the dairy industry "... toward a more efficient structure, while assuring orderly marketing conditions for dairy farmers and handlers."

It also stated that, "As with other pricing options considered, the adopted price structure adds a differential to the Class I price mover — the higher of either the Class III or Class IV milk price — to set the Class I price for every county in the country.

"For the first time, a nationally coordinated pricing structure for milk is established."

Provisionary Changes

Another aspect of the current federal order system is that there are variations among the orders as to definitions, reporting of milk reciepts and uses, and classifications.

According to a USDA summary, "Over the years, the (federal milk marekting orders) have been individualized to account for specific situations associated with a given marketing area.

"However, there are many provisions within the orders that are similar, or that could be similar and still provide for orderly and efficient marketing of milk. Therefore, the final decision also streamlines various provisions, definitions, and terms across orders."

According to the USDA, The final decision is to standardize and consolidate as many order provisions as possible into one set of provisions applicable to all, and reduce the provisions contained in individual orders to those provisions that must be unique to each order.

Standardizing provisions is sought because it is to make clear definitions of terms used, establish regulatory standards for plants and handlers; provide for uniform reporting; and uniform classification.

Further, the changes are to "Eliminate archaic terminology and obsolete provisions, restructure order provisions in a more logical format, simplify the way in which shrinkage (the loss of milk in shipping or processing) is classified and modify the way in which milk components are priced."

Consolidation Of Federal Milk Marketing Orders

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The 1996 Farm Bill requires that the current 31 federal milk marketing order areas be consolidated into no fewer than 10 and no more than 14 orders.

The Farm Bill requires USDA to establish a separate marketing order area for the state of California, if that state's dairy farmers request and approve a marketing order under the FMMO program.

Currently, California has a state marketing program for milk.

The federal milk order final decision provides for 11 marketing areas — Northeast, Appalachian, Florida, Southeast, Mideast, Upper Midwest, Central, Southwest, Arizona-Las Vegas, Western, and Pacific Northwest.

Northeast

Included in the Northeast FMMO are the current marketing areas of New England, New York, New Jersey, and Middle Atlantic federal milk orders.

In addition, the new Northeast FMMO includes the contiguous unregulated areas of New Hampshire, northern New York, and Vermont, as well as the nonfederally regulated portions of Massachusetts.

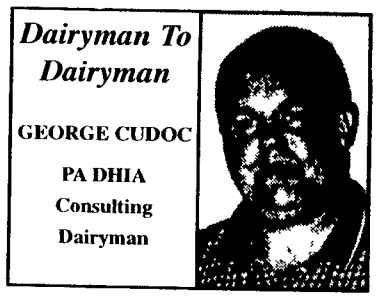
Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association
DHIA Service Center, Orchard Road, University Park, PA 16802



QUESTION: How do you use the Pa.DHIA Nitrogen Management Report? What is step three, and why?

ANSWER: The average herd milk urea nitrogen (MUN) is the right place to begin, but not end.

Examining the range between the low and high MUN value is the next step. The third step is just as important as the previous two, but tells us more about our feeding management than the actual makeup of the diet.

The third step that I use to allow our cows to tell us their side of the nutrition story is to look at the MUN values and how they differ from one lactation group to another.

We must remind ourselves what we are trying to accomplish with the diet eaten by our cows. Our goal is high production with maximum use of feed nutrients while maintaining digestive health.

Sounds simple, doesn't it?

Although we have all experienced some challenges as we have tried to attain this, minimizing these flaws in our cows' diet will help us reach our goal. Let us first look at what we normally see in MUN values of each of the lactation groups.

When the same diet is presented to all cows in the herd and nothing hinders feed availability, we see very similar MUN values. A small trend toward lower MUN is normally seen within first lactation animals.

This suggests that a greater protein need is present for these younger animals than their more mature herdmates.

Growth that the first lactation animal needs to accomplish after calving varies greatly from farm to farm. Even herds with excellent heifer rearing programs still see heifers growing after they calve the first time.

Poorly managed heifers obviously need to grow even more after they calve. Many herds in Pennsylvania are heavily laden with first lactation cows. It is not uncommon to see herds with 40 to 50 percent of the milking herd being first lactation.

These herds need to pay particular attention to the MUN values of the first calvers and there are two reasons for this. One is that they are a large eating and producing segment of the herd. More importantly, these girls are the future and their needs should be high on the priority list.

If single diet TMRs are fed and the MUN of the first lactation group is below the 10 to 14 range then we need to address the protein needs of this group.

This can cause the rest of the herd to have an increased MUN value moving slightly toward 14.

What is wrong when first lactation MUN is greatly different from the second or third-plus lactation group?

As an example, let us look at a herd where first lactation MUN is 6 and the rest of the herd is 11.

This kind of spread tells us one thing for sure.

If the first lactation cows are being fed a different diet from the rest of the herd, then it is out of balance.

If the same diet is being fed to all the cows, then the problem is feed availability to the younger, smaller and more timid cows. We then need to ask ourselves questions about bunk space, feed separation, bare bunk disease, and other such problems.

As a rule, the closer the MUN values of cows that are different by lactation or age, the better.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Dairyman To Dairyman

This tells us that we are not only providing a well-balanced diet, but that the feeding environment dynamics that occur within our management scheme are not holding any of the cows back from reaching their productive potential.

By using this third step in MUN evaluation, we can come closer to the ultimate goal — feeding every cow to have a profitable, efficient, and healthy production.

This is just one of the many situations that I can help you evaluate, discuss and possibly solve during my farm visit. For your visit, call 1-724-625-8971, or 1-800-DHI-TEST.

Although Grace is partially paralyzed by a stroke since this picture was taken, 87-year-old Nelson Gouge still hops on a tractor during the annual Waterloo Boys Plowing Day held on the Gouge farm.

Gouge Family Documents Rich, Colorful History

Married 28 years, John and Susie Gouge weathered the ups and downs of farming together. One of the most traumatic happened when John was injured in a a forage harvester. Although his leg was amputated close to his knee, he has learned to walk without a limp and it hasn't slowed him down.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WEST GROVE (Chester Co.) — Urban sprawl is cropping up all around the Gouge farms in southern Chester County, forcing them to abandon traditional farming methods because of neighbor complaints of farm odors, slow-moving equipment, and pesticides.

The neighbors may be forcing the Gouge family to give up a way of life they have loved and cherished for generations, but they can never eradicate the rich and colorful history documented with newspaper clippings, photographs, and stories retold from generation to generation.

John and Susie Gouge are pleased their adult daughters Laura and Emilie, and Abbie, who lives at home and is in high school, value the stories of their heritage.

"It's fascinating," said Laura Franciscus. Although she is married, lives in York County, and works as a MRI technition, Laura is considered the family geneologist, who works diligently to uncover bits of family history that can be preserved for future generations.

Although many families have photographs, few have as many newspaper clippings as the Gouge family. Among clippings of marriages, engagements, scholastic awards, and involvement in community events are tales of a murder and of John Gouge's own brush with death through a farm accident that required leg amputation. Behind the news accounts shows the staunch, strong endurance of a family that has survived disappointments and hardships.

The news clippings start with a North Carolina murder in 1914. Gouge's great grandfather and a great uncle were shot over a land deal. The murderer was identified but never captured despite the promise of a $500 reward. The family has clippings of the unsolved murder and a picture of the victims in their caskets. Recently Laura tracked down the graves in an abandoned cemetery in the hills of North Carolina.

In 1927, Gouge's grandfather left the southern state to farm in Pennsylvania. He purchased a farm, which is now the site of University of Pennsylvania's New Bolten Research Center. The grandfather helped each of his sons get started in farming. Gouge's dad Nelson was the youngest son. In 1935, the farm referred to as the home farm was purchased. Nelson started milking with four cows, a typical number for that era.

The collection of photgraphs in the family album offer a pictorial history of farming methods. In one picture, Gouge's dad is plowing with mules Pearl and Kate. In the same location years later, he is pictured riding a 720 diesel tractor. A picture captures the first time the milk truck picked up milk in cans at the family farm. It is said the Gouge farm was the first in the area to acquire a John Deere on steel wheels, which was brought in by rail.

In addition to farming, Nelson was a seed corn representative. Because he liked to try "exotic stuff," a picture shows Beefalo, a cross between buffalo and Angus, that was raised on the farm. A picture of his grandfather holding a large cross-cut saw in the 1940s induces the story of how the college-educated man gave up school teaching to farm and become a cattle dealer.

In 1949, Nelson purchased a nearby 80-acre farm, which was named White Clay Creek Farm for the creek that meandered through the meadows.

John graduated from high school in 1967 and began farming full time with his dad. In 1971, John married Susie. Although she had lived only one mile from the Gouge farm, ironically the two did not meet until they were on a European tour in Paris, France.

In researching their heritage, the two discovered they both had ancestors from Tennessee. The couple is married 28 years.

"We are very close. We covered lots of ground together," Gouge said of the good and bad that life has brought them.

At one time, the milking herd numbered 150 head and about 800 acres were worked to provide all the feed needed. But in 1979, a farm accident changed things.

Gouge recalls that he and his dad were clearing cornstalks from a field with a forage harvester, which became clogged.

"I knew better. But we were in a hurry and I had gotten away with it before," Gouge said as he recalled how he pulled himself on top of the harvester, grabbed hold of a metal bar, and began kicking backward.

After a few kicks, the jam ordinarilly dislodged. But this time was different. The machine restarted with a jolt and the shark-teeth drum grabbed his pants leg.

"Before I knew what was happening, my leg was sucked into it," Gouge said. "If my dad wouldn't have reacted quickly, things would have been a lot worse."

His dad jumped off the tractor, shoved the reverse lever, and Gouge slipped out minus a foot.

Blood was everywhere. Because he had been trained with the emergency medical technician with the local fire department and ambulance, Gouge knew the importance of keeping calm. He knew he had to stop the blood flow fast. The injured Gouge pulled off his belt to make a tournique, but yanked it so tight, the belt broke.

His dad used his own belt and a rubber cord found nearby to slow the flow of blood.

Amazingly, Gouge said he did not feel pain. His dad helped him onto the tractor fender and drove him to a neighboring property to call the ambulance.

After a quick trip to the local hospital to stop the bleeding, Gouge was airlifted to University of Maryland Hospital. Subsequent surgeries resulted in amputation below the knee.

During his 52-day stay, Gouge's emotions flunctuated. Anger, despair, fear, and disgust, eventually culminated into acceptance and the determination to farm again.

His leg was cut off almost at the knee. He was fitted with a proth-eses. It took several years, lots of pain and determination, but today Gouge walks without a limp and is proud that he can do most anything.

It was during Gouge's recuperation that his two brothers quit full-time jobs to return to the family farm.

The three brothers formed a partnership.

"We couldn't have continued farming if my brothers hadn't come back," Gouge said. All the brothers were mechanical-minded and shared the workload, but Ron's expertise was with the cows, Tom's with the crops, and John took care of the books and floated wherever he was needed.

The brothers worked well together, but within three years, farm prices forced the brothers to the realization that the farm could not support all three. One brother went to work for the John Deere Company.

"My older brother and I weathered the ups and downs of the industry until his retirement," Gouge said.

"When we had formed the partnership, our primary goal was that there be no hard feelings if the partnership ended."

Gouge is pleased to report, the brothers kept their pledge. "Today we are as close as ever," Gouge said.

Gouge quit milking almost two years ago. Last year, he gave up crop farming and rents out the ground.

"I looked around and saw all the growing development and wondered how to cash in on it," Gouge said. He decided to start a lawn mower sales and repair business, which has proven to be a successful venture.

"But I still have farming in my blood," Gouge said of his search for a closer tie to agriculture.

Because of the many horse farms in the area, Gouge is now brokering hay and straw.

The barns on the home farm now house Gouge's extensive collection of John Deere antique tractors.

Originally Gouge only intended to restore a 1960 John Deere 630 because of the significance of the model. It was his dad's tractor.

But, Gouge said, "I caught the collecting bug and didn't quit."

He frequents farm sales and keeps an eye open for possible finds. He found a 1951 B tractor near a river with trees growing through it. After extensive repairs and restoration, Gouge traded it for a model 330.

Gouge speaks with awe of the 1959 John Deere 330, he acquired.

"I was fortunate to get it. They only made 1,000 of them," he said.

Gouge collects the 30 series. He has five of the six models in the series. He has a 430 crawler, a '59 530, a '79 model 2240, a '78 model 2840, and a 1950 pick up.

"I need the 830 to complete the series, but I'm in no hurry," Gouge said. He did promise his wife that when the set is completed he will buy her a 1950 Chevy truck. Her dad and grandfather had operated a Chevy dealership in the area, and she always liked it because her dad had one.

His brother and grandson also store their antique collection in the barn.

Laura, right, and Abbie enjoy hearing their dad recount family history as they sort through family photos and newsclippings.

"I caught the collecting bug and didn't quit," Gouge said of his restoration and collection of the John Deere 30 series.

Gouge's loyalty to the John Deere models is so well known that, he confessed, "I'm accused of having John Deere underwear, but that isn't true."

Although his dad is 87-years-old, he shares the excitement of seeing an old model restored to its original glory and can't resist taking a turn driving a tractor now and then.

The Waterloo Boys Plowing Days are held on the family farm, most recently on April 3. The Waterloo Boys are named after the Iowa town where the Deere firm once built tractors. Many of its members no longer farm, but their love affair with tractor driving increases.

Gouge said that the show in its former years was used only to display vintage tractors that had been restored.

"But we wanted to hear what they sounded like and see them in action so we decided to hold plowing days.

The annual event where the familiar put-put sound associated with the famous green tractors can

Do you sometimes feel as though the calendar runs your life? Some weeks are very busy and then there will be several days that are blank. Many appointments seem to bump into each other.

Maybe a concert is scheduled for one night and then a travelogue is the following night. As we've purchased tickets, we feel that we should go to the entertainment. The next day we have two invitations for meals — that is too much for one day.

However, we do manage to plant our garden. At least the onions, radishes, and sugar peas are planted. At one time, I planted six pounds of peas but now one-half a pound is enough for us. Years ago many peas and strawberries were sold to neighbors in a nearby development. It was a good way to keep in touch with folks who lived in our area.

Our church has a group of women who always make a meal for families after a funeral. This takes a lot of planning and telephoning. However, people do appreciate the effort and that makes it all worthwhile. I've helped by contributing food as have many others.

On a recent Sunday morning, we got a phone call that really upset us. We were told that our oldest grandson was in a hospital in Florida. He and four of his friends had been in a serious car accident where the car rolled over and over. One boy did not wear a seat belt and he ended up under the car. Our grandson was very lucky and ended up with several broken ribs and a collapsed lung. Those are the times when prayers help.

be heard brings enthusiasts from several surrounding states.

"A lot of guys are no longer farming, but they kept their father's or their grandfather's tractors and the show offers them an annual opportunity to show off their stuff," Gouge said.

Two years ago, when John's parents went to a nursing home, the family sold one of its farm. Gouge retained the house and 62 acres. The family lives in a two-story salt-box style home that is known to date back to 1750. The house is a showcase for antiques, agateware in all colors and styles, old dippers, and other items, which Susie has collected over the years.

The horse-hair plastered walls have been stenciled by Susie. She works full time, but finds time to sew and attend auctions in search of antiques and collectibles.

The Gouge home permeates with historical significance, both in its architectural lines and in the pieces that fill the rooms. But the parents are most pleased that their three daughters value their heritage.

It's a story that no amount of urban sprawl will destroy. A story that will continue to be updated with photographs, news clippings, and family tales.

"Maybe my next job will be a journalist. I'm thinking of writing a book," Gouge said.

John Gouge stands with his daughter Laura at the side of the two-story salt-box style home, which dates further back than 1750.

Egg Possibilities

The good egg is hard to beat no matter how you make it.

Eggs are an excellent source of protein and very low in both fat and saturated fat compared with other sources of high quality protein such as red meats and cheese.

Lots of people have scrambled thoughts about eggs since eggs have taken a beating on the medical front for the past two decades. Accused of being high in cholesterol, eggs were dropped from many diets.

Recent research defends the egg. Dietary cholesterol has little effect on people's cholesterol levels. That means the cholesterol you swallow is not the culprit.

The amount of fat you eat and particularly saturated fat has the largest influence on cholesterol readings. Excluding eggs from the diet is one of the least effective ways to manage cholesterol levels. Foods such as buttered biscuits, rich desserts, and potato chips are the foods to limit.

When it comes to what your body needs, eggs are almost "eggs-actly" the perfect food. Of course, you can abuse them. Cooked in a lot of butter or combined with cream can overload the body with too much fat if you need to watch your weight. But for the majority of people, the body maintains a balance: If cholesterol on the dinner plate goes up, production of body cholesterol often goes down.

Try these recipes. You'll find out that eggs are even better than they're cracked up to be.

Slowly add 2 cups milk, stirring constantly until a smooth paste is formed. Add diced cooked eggs to white sauce. Stir in cheese. Heat until hot. Serve over buttered toast.

Our family enjoys sliced, cooked ham layered on toast also.

Jump start your day with a protein-packed breakfast of eggs. Omelets remain one of the most popular entrees on the breakfast menu.

But omelets are no longer confined to breakfast menus. They keep popping up at buffets, for lunch, and even for dinner. People who don't have time to prepare an omelet before rushing off to work are enjoying them at other times of the day.

Whether it's breakfast, a buffet, lunch or dinner, eggs are "eggs-actly" a great way to fill your body's protein needs.

GARDEN OMELET

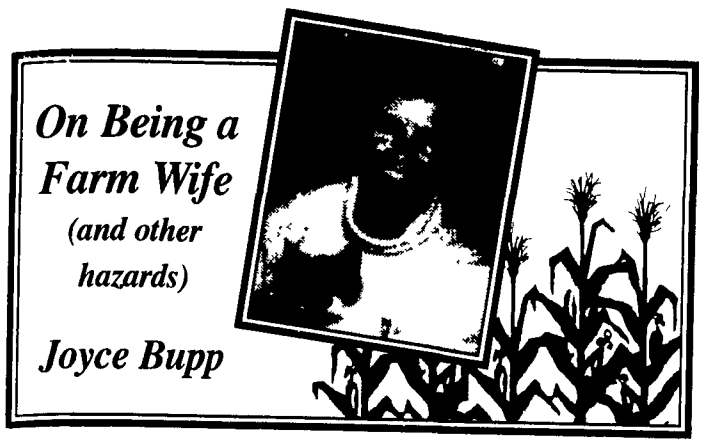
4 servings

2 tablespoons bottled reduced-fat Italian salad dressing
½ cup shredded carrots
¼ cup chopped green onions with tops
¼ cup chopped green peppers
½ cup chopped peeled cucumbers
1 medium tomato, chopped
8 eggs
½ cup skim milk
½ teaspoon salt, optional
4 teaspoons cooking oil, divided
1 cup alfalfa sprouts

In small saucepan over medium heat, cook dressing, carrots, onions, and peppers until tender. Stir in cucumbers and tomatoes. Set aside; keep warm.

Beat together eggs, milk, and salt, if desired. In 7- to 10-inch omelet pan over medium heat, heat 1 teaspoon oil until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in ½ cup of the egg mixture. Mixture should set immediately at edges. With inverted pancake turner, carefully push cooked portions at edges toward center, tilting pan and moving cooked portions so uncooked portions can reach hot pan surface.

When top is thickened and no visible liquid egg remains, fill with one-fourth of the vegetable mixture and ¼ cup alfalfa sprouts. Fold omelet in half. Invert onto plate. Repeat for remaining omelets.



This has all the makings of one of those urban legends.

But this neighborhood sage is a true tale.

It began late last fall, when a stranger stopped by inquiring about some escaped cattle. The stranger turned out to be a new neighbor who had acquired a small farm across the interstate highway from us and populated his pasture with a few head of cattle. The newly-acquired pair of bred, Scottish Highland heifers promptly evacuated his fences and disappeared into our hilly, neighborhood countryside.

Scottish Highland cattle are brown-hued, with shaggy coats and stylish long horns. Bred for their durability, Highlands are tough, rugged and designed by nature to withstand bitter, winter weather without a lot of fancy housing or care.

No unfamiliar brown-coated heifers had turned up with our black-and-whites, though we alerted our crew to watch for the strangers as they moved about the fields. I stashed the owner's business card in the office and promptly forgot about the escapees.

One heifer, we later learned, was recaptured before long. The other runaway apparently made her way down the ridge and staked out territory in a rather isolated section of fields and woods a mile or so away. Periodically, sightings of a shaggy brown cow were reported around the area.

New Year's Day evening, a neighbor who owns part of that secluded area called us Did we know anything about a strange brown shaggy animal they had spotted on their hills? Though I dug through the office, the business card of the owner had vanished, we could at least give directions to where he lived

With the advent of spring, a flurry of sightings of the shaggy bovine with long, pointed horns peppered the local gossip rounds. Apparently, feed in the "hollow" was getting scarce and she was hunting fresh grasses One area resident reported going for her mail and coming virtually face-to-muzzle with the long-horned stray

One night a few weeks ago, my mother-in-law, got a call from a relative in town several miles away, telling her to turn her light on and look at the cow in her yard. The son of the caller had spotted the animal there in passing. And when the heifer began hanging out around her yard and fields on a regular basis, his mom suggested to The Farmer that he consider a roundup strategy

Though they had tried numerous times, the owners had been unable to corral or get a halter on this elusive beast And, though she did not appear to be too wild, even after having spent the entire winter hiding out in the patchwork of woodlots and fencerows, no one was anxious to tangle with her A heifer which has spent months fending for herself, thank you, and sporting a fine set of pointy, foot-long-plus horns is not a critter to be taken lightly

Besides, there was a now greater reason for her wariness Trotting at her side was a diminutive newborn calf The Farmer suggested "laying low" for a week or so, to give Mama a chance to tightly bond with this baby.

On a recent, bright Saturday afternoon, with her new mother and her calf grazing across Mom's meadow, The Farmer saddled up his four-wheeler horse(power) for a roundup attempt Though he tried several approaches, the Highland cow balked every time they got close to the road and sneaked off in another direction Finally, he snagged the calf, swung it behind him, onto the cycle and slowly pulled away Mama Cow obediently trotted right behind, docile as could be

With just a slight hesitation, she followed the contingent across the rural road and up the long lane toward her owner's barn Partway there, The Farmer had to pick up his pace: mother Highland was about to run over him in her haste to reach the barn

"It was as though she knew she was finally home," he chuckled later, as he related a play-by-play of the roundup.

One cow, one calf and one Highland owner are happily reunited

And my mother-in-law can once again retrieve her mail without carrying a lasso

ANSWER — Mary Fisher, Rebersburg, wanted recipes to bake and seal a chocolate cake and brownies in a jar. Thanks to Rachel S. Glick, New Holland, and others for sending recipes.

Cake In A Jar

3 eggs
1 cup oil
2 cups sugar
3 cups flour
3 teaspoons vanilla
3 teaspoons cinnamon
2 cups zucchini, grated
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup raisins (optional)

Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Add vanilla, oil, sugar, and zucchini. Mix lightly, but well. Add flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, and baking powder. Add nuts and raisins, mix well. Use wide-mouth pint canning jars. Spray inside of jars with vegetable spray. Place jars on cookie sheet and fill half full. Do not fill over half full with batter. This is very important. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes. Have round disks cut from waxed paper ready and when cooking time is up place waxed paper disks on top of jar and seal immediately with lids and rings. Be sure waxed paper fits down inside of jar and does not lay on edge of jar. Jars are extremely hot, so be careful. Makes 5-6 jars.

This same procedure can be used for pumpkin bread, banana bread, etc.

Note: This is a nice shelf item to use for drop-in guests. Good served with cream cheese.

Brownies In A Jar

1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup butter
3 tablespoons cocoa powder
¼ cup water
¼ cup buttermilk
1 egg, beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup finely chopped nuts (optional)

Grease or spray two wide-mouth pint jars. In small bowl, stir together flour, sugar, and baking soda; set aside. In a saucepan, combine butter, cocoa, and water. Heat and stir until butter is melted and mixture is well blended. Remove from heat; stir in flour mixture. Add buttermilk, egg, and vanilla, beating by hand until smooth. Stir in nuts. Divide evenly into jars. Place jars on cookie sheet and bake at 325 degrees in preheated oven for 35-40 minutes or until pick inserted comes out clean. Put jar lids in very hot water for 10 minutes before putting on jars. Remove jars from oven, one at a time, and wipe the edge: immediatley put on lid and ring, and tighten firmly.

ANSWER — Sherry Rechlin, N. Franklin, Ct., wanted a recipe for farmer's cheese. Thanks to Minns, Geneva, N.Y., for sending a recipe.

Farmer's Cheese

Heat a gallon of whole pasteurized milk. Raw milk may be used but unfavorable bacteria may develop to about 72 degrees and add ½ cup buttermilk. Stir thoroughly. Cover the milk and let it stand undisturbed in a warm place for 16 to 24 hours until it coagulates. Do not let temperature drop below 70 degrees during clabbering, as this will slow the process, increasing the likelihood of bacterial growth.

Cut curd into ¼ -inch cubes. Heat slowly to 104 degrees and continue to cook until curds retain shape after being pressed. Drain, rinse, and pour into oblong shape on a clean, folded cheesecloth. Wrap cloth over and press lightly with a board.

When rinsing, first remove cooked curds from heat. Drain through cheesecloth, allow to stand for a minute or two, then lift up corners of cheesecloth to make a bag. Dip the bag several times into warm water. Rinse for two minutes in ice water to chill the curds; and let the water drain off.

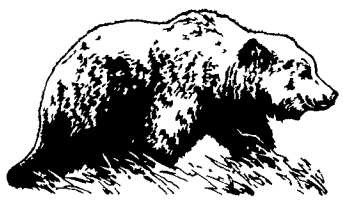
Grrrrrrrrizzly Bears



The fiercest and most aggressive of all bears, the grizzly grows to an average of six feet and can weigh from 200 to 650 pounds

Part of the European and Asian brown bear family, the grizzly can live up to 30 years It is found in Canada, Alaska, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Washington The biggest grizzly population in the United States is in Yellowstone National Park

The paws on a grizzly bear are broad and flat with long claws Just one blow from the paw of a grizzly can kill an animal of the same size, and they have no natural enemies except man

The grizzly eats fruits, berries, nuts, insects, honey, fish, rodents and lizards A grizzly hunts for food in the spring and summer, then eats a lot in the fall to build up extra fat for the deep winter sleep

During the fall, the grizzly also digs a den Most of the time, the grizzly bear moves into the den when there is snow on the ground and doesn't come out until spring However, on nice, sunny days, some grizzlies will leave their dens and search for food

How do birds sleep?

Well, it depends on the type of bird. Take mallards, for example. These wild ducks add new meaning to the phrase "half asleep."

Mallards, along with several other kinds of birds, can doze with one half of their brain, called a hemisphere, in a peaceful state of slumber. The other hemisphere stays alert, keeping a watchful eye out for danger. And, ornithologists (people who study birds; say OR-ni-THAL-ah-jist) recently discovered that mallards can control which side of the brain stays alert.

Mallards tend to line up in rows, wing to wing, when they rest

Birds in the middle of the row go into a deep, full-brain sleep. The ornithologists think that is because the middle birds know they are less likely to be attacked by a hungry animal A smart fox would go for the easy prey — the unprotected last bird on either end of the row The ornithologists found that the birds on the end keep the eye farthest away from its fellow ducks peeled open, looking for danger When the ornithologists changed the location of the ducks in the line, the ducks changed which half of the brain was switched off — or on.

Don't you try to function half asleep, though Humans just can't shut down their brain like that, no matter how nice it would be to catch some zzz's!

Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Experts have warned for years that repetitive dieting — especially with quick loss diets — can be dangerous for your health. Yet Americans stubbornly and usually with futility continue to diet. Some people go through several cycles of gaining weight, losing weight and gaining weight again — which is often referred to as yo-yo dieting.

Now, however, there is an argument that may finally convince people to stop dieting and simply eat sensibly to achieve a healthy weight. Repetitive dieting actually can make you fatter.

The problem with diets, and many of us have observed firsthand, is that when you go off the diet you tend to gain back the weight you lost. And that leads to a tricky situation. When you diet and lose weight, you lose both fat and muscle tissue. When you gain back that weight, you gain mostly fat but not much muscle. Even if you weigh the same as before, you are fatter. That is, you have more fat and less muscle and lean tissue than you had before the diet.

The more you diet, lose weight, gain it back, and then lose it again, the fatter you are likely to become. The extra body fat can also increase your risk of heart disease And along that disastrous route of yo-yo dieting, your body is losing vital muscle tissue.

The loss of muscle and lean tissue leads to more problems. Muscle tissue burns more calories than fat tissue does. When you lose muscle and lean tissue, you lose calorie-burning abilities. After dieting you'll gain weight faster because your body burns fewer calories.

In one study, a group of rats was put on a low-calorie and then high-calorie diet, so that their weight fluctuated. On the weight-loss diet, the rats took 21 days to lose a certain amount of weight, and then 46 days to gain it back. The second time they were put on the low-calorie diet, it took twice as long (45 days) to lose the same amount of weight they had lost the first time. But they gained back the weight in less than one-third the time (14 days).

In another study, a physician discovered that dieters who lost an average of three pounds a week the first time they went on a very low-calorie diet lost only two pounds a week the second time on the diet.

The body, which fortunately has evolved for survival rather than fashion purposes, doesn't like diets. Give your body too few calories and it will think it is being threatened with starvation. It will cope by lowering the rate at which you burn calories so that you can survive on fewer calories.

If weight loss is one of your goals, achieve it sensibly. Avoid fad diets that promise quick weight loss. Instead, learn to eat nutritious foods and avoid empty-calorie foods — those that are high in calories but low in nutrition, like fats, sweets, and alcohol. The longer you take to lose weigh, the better your chances of keeping it lost. Exercise more to burn calories and keep in shape.

Many Penn State Cooperative Extension offices offer My New Weigh Of Life (NWOL), an affordable weight management program based on research. The program consists of 12 two-hour sessions with each session providing educational information about food and food choices. The NWOL program includes a participant's manual and many other incentives. For more information about the program, contact your county cooperative extension office.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

For Vermont applications, send to: Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State St., Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 1999.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Delaware Family Offers Farming Experience To Kids

NEWARK, Del. — On a winter's day the skies are overcast, but the mood of Sylvia and Bill Walther is anything but gray. They stand proudly beside the sign that proclaims their 109-acre farm a Century Farm — a distinction bestowed by the state to honor Delaware families that have farmed their land continuously for more than 100 years.

The sister and brother farming team makes up the third generation of Walthers to live and work the Bear, Del., farm since their grandfather bought the place in 1876. They raise beef cattle and a variety of fresh vegetables ("you name them, we grow them," says Sylvia) to sell at their summertime roadside stand. They also grow corn, barley and hay to feed the cattle. Until 1990, the Walthers had a dairy operation, but that ended with the increasing traffic on Walther Road, which divides their acreage.

"Because we pastured the herd across the road from the barn, we had to stop traffic twice a day to lead the cows over," relates Sylvia. "It didn't take long, but people in cars just got too impatient — they had no time to stop for such things."

Farming is how Sylvia and Bill Walther have made their living for more than half a century, and 4-H is one way they have given back to their community.

Sylvia is the leader of the oldest 4-H club in New Castle County. Founded in 1929, the Bear 4-H club was the one Sylvia and Bill belonged to as children growing up. Their mother, Dora, was leader. Sylvia, 71, took over club leadership when she was 20. In the time since, she has seen more than 1,200 youngsters grow under her guidance to become productive, skilled adults through 4-H.

As a young 4-H'er Sylvia says she "stuck with" the farm-related projects like raising broilers and vegetables.

"I wasn't into the sewing and cooking stuff, even then," says Sylvia, with a wink at her brother. Bill nods in amused agreement. For his projects, Bill raised swine and field crops, things he was already doing on the farm helping his folks.

"4-H has changed over the last 50 years," notes Bill. "Growing up, we had mostly farm and homemaking activities. Now they also have things like dog training and computers."

The Walthers don't seem fazed by the continuous residential and commercial buildup surrounding their farm, which is just off Route 40. Instead, through 4-H, they have invited suburban youngsters to learn first-hand what it's like to be on a farm and take care of livestock.

For children who are three and four generations away from any kind of farm, what the Walthers offer them is an eye-opening, heart-expanding experience. Of the current 26 Bear 4-H Club members, seven are raising feeder pigs and steers, which are housed on the Walther farm. Each 4-H'er takes one day a week to take care of everyone else's pigs, a strategy that also teaches teamwork and cooperation.

"You should see them the first time they set eyes on a pig that close up," Sylvia says. She laughs at the recollection. "They back off, a little afraid, but soon they jump right in there, taking care of the pigs and loving it."

Sister and brother farming team Sylvia and Bill Walther share their century farm with the non-farming community.

In addition to caring for the animals from day one, the 4-H'ers learn about showmanship in the ring — an important skill in exhibiting livestock. The Walters' nephew, Wally Gott of Glasgow, is their 4-H livestock project leader. Bear Club 4-H'ers show their animals at the Cecil County, Md., Breeders Fair as well as at the Delaware State Fair.

"The Walthers exemplify what 4-H is all about," says Mark Manno, Cooperative Extension 4-H and youth educator at the University of Delaware. "Their more than 50 years of leadership and commitment to 4-H offers the kids of today a real stability and continuity. Sylvia and Bill generously share their farm and expertise, giving city and suburban kids a glimpse into a kind of life and an experience they would never get otherwise."

Sylvia shrugs off such praise. Recently, when she and her brother were named 1998 4-H Adult Volunteer Award winners for the Delaware, she wondered what all the fuss was about. For her, it's not that complicated: she continues to volunteer for 4-H because she cares about children, and it's the right thing to do.

"4-H keeps the kids off the street and gives them purpose," says Sylvia. "And it keeps me young!"

Mutual Funds Basics

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — A mutual fund is a company that collects money from many people and invests it in a variety of securities. Mutual funds are a good way to invest in stocks, bonds and other securities for three reasons. One, the securities are managed by professional managers. Two, because you have a collection of different stocks and bonds, your risk is spread out or diversified. And three, because the fund buys in large quantities, its costs are lower than what you would pay on your own.

There are thousands of different mutual funds. Deciding where to put your money in these mutual funds can boggle the mind. An educational program on "Mutual Funds: The Basic and Beyond" will be held on consecutive Tuesday evenings, April 13 and April 20 from 7 - 9 p.m. in the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Meeting room, Courthouse, Honesdale. The workshops will describe some of the information you need to examine when selecting mutual funds. It will describe the different types of funds, factors to consider in selecting, where to focus your reading of the prospectus, types of fees charged, how you can make money in mutual funds, and records you need to keep.

There is a $5 charge for the program and registration is requested.

To register, call Wayne County Cooperative Extension a (570) 253-5970 X 239.

Industry Scrambles To Meet Food Trends

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Mushrooms may soon have a new image.

For years, mushrooms have been touted as a low-fat food, but when it came to nutrition, mushrooms did not have a lot to offer.

Now the industry is experimenting with growing mushrooms in selenium- and calcium-enriched soils that results in nutrient-enriched mushrooms.

According to Dave Carroll, president of Giorgi Mushroom Company, recent studies indicate selenium-rich foods reduce cancer risks and offers other health benefits. The mushroom industry wants to capitalize on this finding and offer a product that is a rich source of selenium.

"Functional foods or nutraceuticals are the leading trend in the food industry," said Dr. Clare Hasler of the University of Illinois.

The definition of nutraceuticals or functional food is broad, but the terms mostly referred to substances considered food or part of food that provides medical or health benefits, including disease prevention.

Carroll, Hasler, and other speakers at The Pennsylvania Food Industry: Strengthening Partnerships for Growth Seminar, held last week in Grantville, addressed issues facing the food industry.

The baby boomers, the buff of consumers, are an aging population with increased interest in health concerns. Recent technical advances and scientific findings reveal an increasing connection between diet and health.

Studies have shown that cancer, heart disease, stress, high cholesterol, overweight, osteoporosis, and diabetes can be affected by diet.

Consumer demand is driving the marketing focus on nutraceutical foods. Consumers want food that contain nutrients—not just low fat.

Prevention is the focus. But the means to prevention has shifted recently. Consumers are not as concerned with taking out "bad" ingredients such as fat and salt as they had been in recent years. Instead they are wanting the "good" added, according to Hasler.

Calcium added to orange juice is a prime example of a product that has had "good added" and been labeled for its health benefits.

Carroll said that mushrooms grown in soils that are selenium and calcium-enriched not only become a nutritional source but also are whiter at harvest, less susceptible to bruising, have a better shelf life, and show no negative effects to yield.

Nutraceuticals are only part of the functional food market that is expected to grow. But the proliferation of products in the marketplace has spurred concern by some that functional foods and nutraceuticals have no regulatory status in the states.

In the U.S., selected health claims have been legally permitted to appear on food labels since 1990. These include recognition of the following:

- Sodium - hypertension.
- Calcium - osteoporosis.
- Vegetables-fiber.
- Fruits and vegetables - cancer.
- Folate - birth defects.
- Saturated fat, cholesterol.
- Fat and cancer.
- Fiber contained in grains, fruit, and vegetables.
- Sugar, alcohol and dental cavities.

The interest in nutraceuticals bring up questions on how much scientific research is needed to substantiate health claims? How much is an effective dose? What are the adverse effects? Will nutraceuticals cause possible negative interaction with cancer treatments, hormonal replacement, and allergies?

The gap between food and drugs is narrowing. It is a difficult and long process required to gain label approval for health claims.

To gain approval, research must be published in medical journals and numerous clinical trials conducted. The average cost for approval is $400-$500 million, and approval time often requires 15 years.

Because companies can use a competing company's research for their own purposes, companies often are discouraged from paying the immense cost associated with clinical trials. Since standards for advertising is more lax than those required for labels, companies often use health claims in advertising products rather than spend the money to gain approval for labeling.

Designer foods appear to be the wave of the future but are not without problems. Even if research trials document health benefits and FDA approval is gained, the product must attract consumer awareness for successful marketing. This requires media attention.

The two-day seminar Pennsylvania Food Industry: Strengthening Partnerships for Growth confirmed the need for industry, government, and academia to work together to tackle critical issues facing the food industry. Here some of the speakers answer questions posed by the audience. From left, LeRoy Corbin Jr., Stephen Knabel, and Lynn Bonner.

Food safety was another issue addressed at the two-day seminar. Catherine Woteki, from the USDA, said that the government recognizes that safety must be based on scientific facts and not on emotional responses. Basic sanitation and food safety must be taught to consumers, food handlers, and retailers, and not be the sole responsibility of the producers and processors, Woteki said.

Consumers wrongly perceive that food safety is worse today than in previous years, but this is because foodbourne illnesses are more easily identified today.

The goal is to intergrate federal, state, and local requirements to ensure a safe food supply. With food coming from all over the world, it is important that standards be implemented for world trade. Also, science should be the final authority on food safety issues such as the European reaction to the beef hormone issue. The U.S. government believes scientific studies support the fact that U.S.-produced beef is safe.

Ron Fouche of Seltzer Smoke House Meats, said that companies such as his are the most higly regulatory industry in the U.S., even more than the nuclear industry.

"We are not the bad guys. We have the safest food supply in the world," Fouche said.

He said that his company strides to work with government regulations but finds it frustrating to hold products because the USDA inspection takes 16 days to release testing results that could be completed within 48 hours.

"For the food industry to advance, it is important that government, industry, and academia work together," Fouche said.

Stephen Knabel and Hassan Gourama of Penn State explained how land grant universities can assist industries with critical issues such as food safety, research, regulations, and international trade.

Frances Katz, director of publications for the Institute of Food Technologists, predicted that top trends influencing the manufacture of mainstream products include the following:

- A shift from a society that consumes food prepared at home to food prepared by food services.
- Society prefers fresh food but don't understand why foods need to be seasonal.
- Aging society that is living longer after active work lives.
- Consumers are becoming more sophisticated yet indulge in comfort foods.
- The U.S. is a wealthy island surrounded by great poverty that may threaten to wash over "our little piece of green."
- Consumers have a better understanding of nutrition and treat food as medicine in some ways. New products that fit into the nutritional medicine category have a better chance of succeeding in a field that currently has nine out of 10 new products failing.

Other topics addressed during the two-day conference included attracting and retaining a frontline workforce, accessing useful technologies, and opening global markets for Pennsylvania products.

Consumers want foods that contain nutrients. The leading trend in the food industry is "nutraceuticals," food that provides medical or health benefits, including disease prevention.

Mushrooms may soon have a new identity. Research is showing that mushrooms grown in selenium and calcium-enriched soils become nutrient rich. The mushroom industry wants to capitalize on the food trend toward nutraceutical foods and offer a product with health benefits to consumers.

Susan Fisher

Recently friends of ours were concerned because their four-year-old daughter was not eating well. The parents were very frustrated and meal times were becoming a battleground. To make matters worse their one-year-old was watching big sister and starting to push away some types of food.

I must admit there have been times when I was about to pull my hair out because our daughter was not eating like I thought she should. Notice I said the way I thought she should. Parents need to remember several things when trying to feed young children.

First, their stomachs are much smaller than ours. This has two effects, serving sizes need to be smaller and meals more frequent. On average the serving size for a child is about 1 tablespoon per year of age. So for example, a serving of peas for a two-year-old would be about 2 tablespoons. That's 1/8 of a cup. An adult serving is 1/2 cup and most of us probably eat more than that. So, expecting a child to eat as much as we eat is not realistic. Use smaller plates and/or bowls for a child and make the servings small. If they ask for seconds, that's great, but do not overwhelm them with the first serving. Also, do not be surprised if after one or two bites on the second helping they are full.

Children need more frequent meals because their stomachs are smaller and they burn energy quickly. A child will probably want to have a snack two to three hours after having eaten a meal. This will help to hold them until the next meal. You really cannot expect a young child to eat lunch at noon and not eat again until five or six o'clock that evening. But with their stomachs being so small, you don't want to waste snacks on high calorie, low nutrient foods. Instead, give them fruit, pretzels, cereal, raw vegetables, a half of sandwich, cheese, etc. These choices will provide them with a nutritious snack and help ease your mind when at a meal, they take a few bites and say they are full. You will know that they have eaten a good variety of foods throughout the day.

Next, try to learn your child's daily routine. Our daughter eats a big breakfast and slowly through the day reduces the amounts she eats (unless macaroni and cheese is on the dinner menu). It is not unusual for her to eat two cups of cereal or oatmeal for breakfast and a piece of fruit. If you think about it, she has not eaten since snack the night before so it's been about 11 hours. She definitely breaks the fast but then throughout the day she will dwindle off on the amount she eats. I have learned to be more patient at dinner when she fills up quickly and to try to get a variety of foods in her throughout the day.

Be forewarned that their routine will vary with growth spurts and the amount of energy they are expending through the day. A rainy day inside is likely to cause smaller appetites.

What they can eat will also change throughout the first few years. Popcorn, whole grapes, nuts, etc. should be avoided for the first two years because of the choking hazard. It may take several years before they are able to chew some meats easily.

Do not be concerned about food jags such as, eating only peanut butter sandwiches for a week. Serve the sandwiches with a glass of milk and offer them fruit and vegetables with them and for snacks. They will eventually start eating other things.

When introducing new foods, always offer something they like with them Give them the right to say they do not like something. Remember you do not like all foods either and their tastes may be very different from yours. Offer the food again. They may change their minds. Be prepared though, that they may also decide they do not like something that they ate yesterday. Part of this is taste and part of it is asserting their independence.

Many children do not like their foods mixed (unless they do it themselves). Casseroles are sometimes hard sells. You may have to separate the foods on their plate. For children who like to mix their foods together but will not eat a casserole, try letting them help make the casserole.

At meal time, turn off the television and have them eat at the dining room table with you. You need to set an example. Let them know there are certain foods you do not like but many that you do eat. Make dinner conversation pleasant Avoid fighting about how much they eat. A little coaxing may not hurt but let them make the final decision. We all eat better when we are calm so change the subject from the food to something else.

Desserts are fine, especially if they are foods like pudding or fruit or oatmeal raisin cookies Other sweets are also OK once in awhile. The caution with desserts is to not tie how much the child eats at dinner to whether or not they get dessert The idea of making them clean their plate in order to get dessert is not a good idea. They may really be full (or close to full). If you force them to eat all that is on their plate and then dessert, they may be over full This does not help them to learn how not to over eat

Lastly, give them some choices. Let them help decide what is for dinner. Some nights, they could choose the main course, some the vegetables Offer items to choose from so you are sure you have what you need to prepare what they choose Let them be involved in the preparation even if all they do is empty a can, tear the lettuce on stir something.

Remember, the most you can do is set an example and offer them choices For additional information check out "How To Get Your Kid To Eat But Not Too Much," by Ellyn Satter and "Feeding Your Preschool Child," Penn State Cooperative Extension, EFNEP publication number 260

ANSWER — Harold Stoudt, Hamburg, wanted the words to a poem he remembers from his youth. Here are the words from a reader. The poem was written by Henry Van Dyke.

America For Me

'Tis fine to see the Old World, and travel up and down
Among the famous palaces and cities of renown,
To admire the crumbly castles and the statues of the kings,—
But now I think I've had enough of antiquated things.

So It's home again, and home again, America for me!
My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be,
In the land of youth and freedom beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air,
And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair;
And it's sweet to dream in Venice, and it's great to study Rome;
But when it comes to living, there is no place like home.

I like the German fir-woods, in green battalions drilled;
I like the gardens of Versailles, with flashing fountains filled;
But oh, to take your hand, my dear, and ramble for a day
In the friendly Western woodland where Nature has her way!

I know that Europe's wonderful, yet something seems to lack:
The Past is too much with her, and the people looking back,
But the glory of the Present is to make the Future free,—
We love our land for what she is and what she is to be.

Oh, it's home again, and home again, America for me!
I want a ship that's westward bound to plow the rolling sea,
To the blessed Land of Room Enough beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Taking Time by Rebecca Escott

"Please, Not Here!"

Did you ever notice, kids have a great talent for picking out the most public times to misbehave? Or they decide to challenge your non-negotiable family rule on the day when everything else has gone wrong and your blood pressure is already on edge?

You find yourself saying under your breath (or out loud), "Please, not here. Not today. Not now!"

Disciplining children is an on-going challenge for parents. It starts with the exploring toddler and continues through the teenager who breaks curfew and the college student who breaks an agreement about the use of a credit card. And parents may find themselves at their "wit's end." I had a dad recently ask me, "What are you supposed to do if you're been in a doctor's office with your kids waiting for an appointment, and they are just out of control? What are you supposed to do when you get them back in the car?"

That was a hard question, but I had a few thoughts.

First, parents sometimes put themselves in situations that cry "trouble." If you take two or three kids straight from school or day care to a packed waiting room at the end of your work day only to have them sit on uncomfortable chairs with nothing to do but sit quietly, you can expect trouble from all but the most self-controlled children. They are restless. They probably haven't eaten recently. They may be bored. They may feel sick. They may be scared. They may be annoyed that they have to spend their free time at this office because a sister or brother has an appointment. These are all prime reasons that children act out

I advised this dad, that, if possible, in the future, a lot of work needs to take place before the appointment. Pack interesting substantial snacks. Ask a friend or neighbor to watch one of the children so you only have to manage the child who really needs to be at the appointment. Take along a toy or some entertainment that is saved for these "boring" times. Consider investing in headphones or a portable player so kids could listen to music or play a video game without annoying others.

Have a conversation with your children before going. Be honest with them. Tell them it may be a long wait. Tell them you realize they may get bored. Ask them to pick a favorite thing to occupy their time. Consider planning a reward for appropriate behavior—like picking up pizza on the way home or getting to pick a video at the store. You don't always have to reward children's good behavior with something material, but in the most challenging times it may be worthwhile.

Even when you've done all the advanced work, your children may still misbehave. Here are a few more tools to add to your discipline box for those moments.

Try changing the surroundings or equipment. If your children are kicking each other at the table, move the chairs farther apart or position yourself between them. Do this with as little fanfare as possible.

"Kicking is not okay," then simply move the chairs. If they spill the snacks you brought, find a container that is more spill-proof or dole items out in smaller portions that they can handle. These changes make it less likely for the bad behavior to occur.

A second tool is the "when/then rule." Tell your child your expectations saying, "When you...then you can..." For instance, "When you have finished your spelling assignment, then you can watch the TV show you want." Notice the parent isn't saying, "If you..." she is saying "When" which makes the expectation firmer.

When things are getting tense, try out the tool of laughter. Can you distract your child or change the direction of the conversation with some laughter? Tell them about a silly thing that you saw. Ask them to think of ridiculous wishes. "When we go back to the doctor's office, wouldn't it be really funny if..." Have them come up with impossible, hysterical scenarios as a way to occupy their time and lighten their mood.

If all these fail, resort to the broken record technique. When a rule needs to be enforced and your child starts to whine or argue, simply restate the rule in the same words with a very flat tone of voice until the arguing stops. "Mom, I'm bored. You said we'd only have to wait a half-hour." "We need to stay here until the dentist has finished your sister's filling." "But I don't want to." "We need to stay here until the dentist has finished your sister's filling." "I hate being here. They only have news on the TV." "We need to stay here until the dentist has finished your sister's filling." Don't raise your voice. Don't enter the argument when there is no room for change.

Be smart enough to know when to cut your losses and take misbehaving kids to the car. At least then their misbehavior is less public. Ask the receptionist to estimate the time and go for a walk around the building. Ask someone to signal you when our appointment time arrives. These are humbling things to do, but most professionals will understand your pressure and try to support you.

These truly are times that parents' souls but with a few more tools and some preparation, perhaps your next discipline challenge will not be as severe.

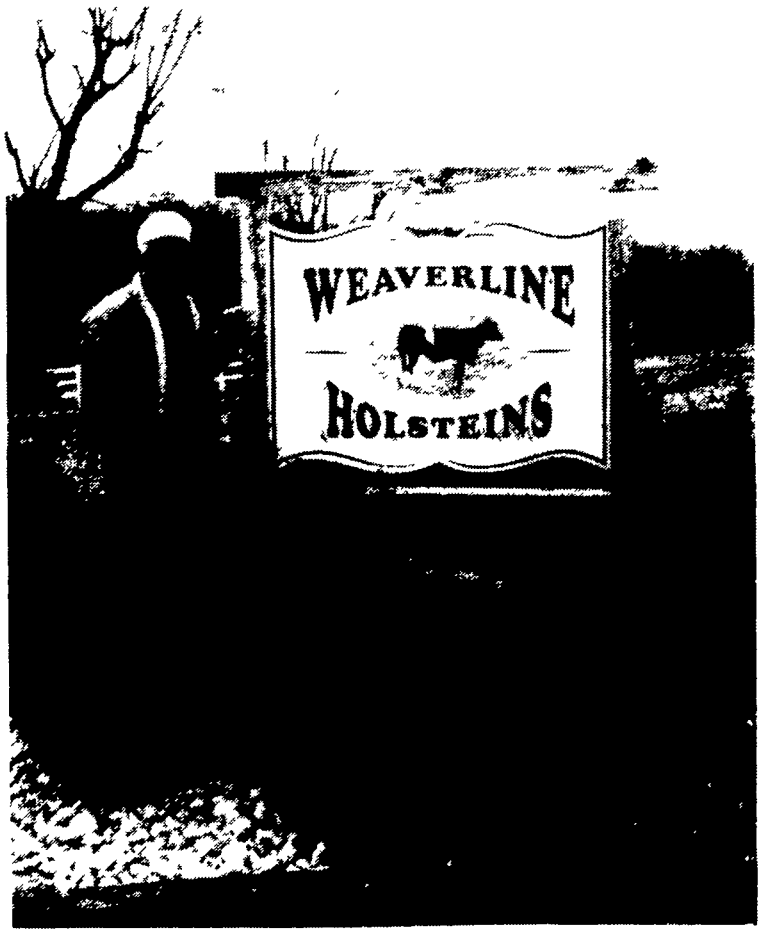
BUSINESS ❖ NEWS

Lapp's Awards Prizes At Open House



GAP (Lancaster Co.) — A three-day open house in March was a success for Lapp's Barn Equipment, based here. Farmers from all over the Northeast enjoyed deep discounts, a delicious free lunch, and prizes.

The grand prize of $2,000 in Jamesway parts was awarded to Jay Weaver of Weaverline Holsteins, Myerstown, pictured here. Also, door prizes were awarded, including a first place award of a Craftsman toolbox with tools to Joshua Stoltzfus, Honey Brook. Second place, a microwave oven, went to Irvin Zimmerman, Fleetwood. Third place, a J-Star jacket and hat, went to Dwayne Pelfer, Kirkwood.

White Oak Mills, Elizabethtown, held an open house Wednesday with tours, Pancakes and Sausage all day, and Dr. Jim VanHorn from Penn State giving seminars on farm stress and how to overcome it. The event was held as a customer appreciation day and more than 400 guests attended. In the photo are from left, John and Mark Wagner, owners, and Dr. VanHorn.

'Fast' Describes New Combine Models

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Faster field speeds, faster unloading rate, faster adjustments from the cab, and faster servicing are hallmarks of the new Models TR™89 and TR™99 Twin Rotor® combines from New Holland.

Building on the time-tested Twin Rotor combine technology, New Holland has introduced two new models: the TR89, a 240-hp combine with a 190-bushel grain tank and the larger, 280-hp TR99 with a 240-bushel grain tank. Both are powered by new, turbocharged, and intercooled 6-cylinder Genesis™ engines.

The increased horsepower and impressive power bulge of the engines allows operators to power through the toughest harvest conditions, yet keep more grain in the tank. And the new design of the elevator and bubble-up auger provides improved grain flow and higher capacity to handle the increasing demands operators place on the grain handling system.

Faster ground speeds are also possible because of the unmatched throughput capability of the New Holland Twin Rotor threshing, separating, and cleaning systems. The centrifugal force of two rotors is more gentle and efficient than conventional straw-walker designs.

The combination of centrifugal force and the rubbing action of several passes over the grates releases even the toughest grains, so more ends up in the tank, not on the ground. The New Holland exclusive rear beater and adjustable grate separate any remaining grain to further guarantee the lowest losses in the industry. It's a design that delivers results that count — more grain in the tank, less damage and a cleaner sample.

Unloading rate has been improved by 25 percent over previous models. At 2.2 bushels per second, the TR89 and TR99 provide the fastest unloading rate in the industry.

Viewing combine functions and making changes on the go are easier than ever. The location of the monitor has been adjusted for even better visibility. And the TR99 offers two new in-cab controls. The new header lateral tilt indicator allows the operator to monitor and maintain the exact header position desired. The new electric concave adjustment permits fine-tuning of the threshing system without leaving the cab.

The new TR combines feature faster servicing, too. New service shielding glides open on gas struts to make routine service checks even faster.

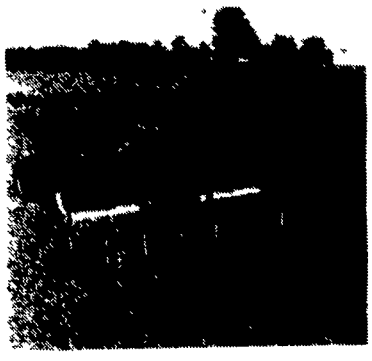
Case Adds Six-Row Planter To ASM Family

RACINE, Wis. — To meet performance needs in a broader range of farming operations, Case Corporation extends the new Case IH 1200 Series Advanced Seed Meter (ASM) planter line with a six-row narrow trailing planter.

Like its larger counterparts, the new six-row planter features unmatched in-row seed spacing and population accuracy at higher field operating speeds. This planter will help operations of all sizes make the most of every moment during the critical spring planting window.

"Small and irregularly shaped fields pose transport and access difficulties for larger equipment," said Dale Simpson, marketing manager for Case IH Planting and Seeding Systems. "The six-row trailing planter offers 1200 Series ASM planter advantages to small-acreage growers and larger growers operating in diverse field conditions."

Versatility is built into the 1200 Series planters, allowing growers to easily change planting rates and seed discs. Sixteen standard seed discs, a transmission that can be easily adjusted, and a unique seed clean-out hatch combine to help farmers quickly and easily switch from corn to cotton to soybeans.



The six-row narrow trailing planter pictured here with the liquid fertilizer attachment is the newest addition to the Case IH 1200 Series Advanced Seed Meter (ASM) planter family.

In addition, the six-row trailing 1200 Series planter offers optional granular chemical, liquid and dry fertilizer, as well as row-mounted tillage attachments.

"In one pass with a 75 to 85 PTO horsepower tractor and six-row trailing planter, a grower can apply starter fertilizer, control pests and create a precision controlled environment for every seed," said Simpson. "The ASM metering system combined with Early Riser row units provide unmatched in-row seed spacing, population accuracy, depth control and seed-to-soil contact that delivers quick, even emergence and picture-perfect stands."

All 1200 Series planters feature a Case IH Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) Universal Display as standard equipment for control and monitoring of planter functions. The display monitors total acres, total population and population by row based on variations to the total population setting. Another screen display alerts the operator to no seed flow and the hopper seed level. The touch-screen display is transferable and can be used with other Case IH equipment.

Deere Expands Compact Tractor Line

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere is adding five new models to its 4000 Series Compact Tractor line. The new tractors join the 4100 Tractor introduced in 1997 and replace the John Deere 55 and 70 Series Compact Tractors.

The 4100, 4200, 4300, 4400, 4500, and 4600 Tractors range in size from 20 to 43 horsepower. The 4000 Series' diesel engines run quieter and provide improved fuel economy. They also meet federal emission standards that are likely to take effect in 2000.

The 4000 Series Tractors have the versatility and convenience to easily handle a wide variety of assignments, from high-capacity mowing jobs to heavy loading. The new series is compatible with more than 15 different kinds of attachments, such as loaders, backhoes, rotary cutters, flail mowers, post-hole diggers, planters, disks, and field cultivators.

For ample hydraulic power, the John Deere 4000 Series Compact Tractors feature two hydraulic pumps; one for the hydrostatic power steering system and one for implements and attachments,. A

The 43-horsepower John Deere 4600 compact tractor is one of five new models added to the 4000 Series tractor line. The new series offers the versatility and convenience to easily handle a wide variety of jobs.

Category 1 3-point hitch is standard. Hitch lift capacities range from 930 pounds with the 4100 Tractor to 2,500 pounds for the 4600 Tractor.

Depending on the tractor model, the choice of an economical Collarshift transmission, high-performance SyncReverser™ and PowrReverser™ gear transmissions, or the clutchless performance of a hydrostatic transmission is available.

The 4000 Series Tractors offer the versatility of mid and rear power takeoffs and the convenience of engaging and disengaging on the go. The 4100 Tractor with a gear transmission offers selectable, transmission-driven mid and rear PTOs. Mid and rear PTOs are standard equipment on all but the two largest models, which offer standard rear and optional mid PTOs.

Annual Ohio Bull Test Sale April 17

BELLE VALLEY, Ohio — Belle Valley will echo with the sounds of determined buyers and bellowing cattle at the Ohio Bull Test Sale, April 17.

This year's 30th anniversary sale is a cooperative effort of the Ohio Cattleman's Association, Ohio State University Extension, and the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center. The sale will feature more than 100 Angus, Charolais, Polled Hereford, Simmental, Red Angus, Limousin, Gelbvieh, and Chiangus bulls.

"The Ohio Bull Test is a 112-day performance test that primarily examines average daily gain (ADG)," said Eric Dorr, OSU extension associate and director of beef improvement programs for the Ohio Cattlemen's Association.

"The test is an educational tool that demonstrates the variation in growth patterns of different types, breeds and kinds of cattle. It provides a standard, impartial post weaning test for rate of gain, soundness and condition on high grain. It's also an opportunity for breeders to collect progeny group information on herd sires," Dorr said.

The bull test begins in early November with the delivery of young, weaned, registered bulls to the Eastern Ohio Resource Development Center in Belle Valley, Noble County. Every 28 days, the bulls are weighed and their progress documented. On day 84, the bulls are weighed, ultrasounded for ribeye area and fat thickness, measured for hip height and frame score, and measured for scrotal circumference The test ends March 24, and at that time, the bull test committee determines which bulls will qualify for sale.

Dorr said in order for a bull to qualify, he must have a ratio 90 or higher within his own breed test group

"The ratio is established using the average ADG between all the bulls in the same breed group. If a breed group has fewer than six head entered in the test, they are grouped with other breeds with fewer than six head — forming one mixed group Because so many Angus cattle were entered into the test, they were broken into junior (calves born in March and April 1998) and senior groups (calves born in January and February 1998)."

A ratio of 100 equals the average ADG within each group. A bull with a ratio of 110 grew 10 percent faster than the average of the test group. A bull whose ratio equals 90 grew 10 percent slower than the average of that test group. The other minimum qualifications for sale bulls include a minimum scrotal circumference of 30 centimeters and a minimum frame score of four. In addition to meeting these sale requirements, bulls are also evaluated on breeding soundness, which includes a semen check and reproductive examination, and must be classified as "Satisfactory Potential Breeders" to be included in the sale.

Producers will be able to purchase bulls from four remote sale locations this year Bulls purchased this way will be delivered free of charge to that remote location. Each remote site will have a video available. The video will feature bulls that will be sold on April 17. Anyone interested in purchasing bulls from a remote site should contact the following individuals for details about sale day procedures:

LANCASTER FARMING'S INTERNET HOME PAGE DRAWS FAVORABLE COMMENTS

In recent months Lancaster Farming joined the wide world of agriculture on the Internet with a homepage that has already started to draw favorable comments from our viewers and traffic counts of 25,000 plus per month for our advertisers. We have worked hard to keep our down-on-the-farm values in this ultri-modern communication system. The first items we put on line, mailbox markets and public sale registry, still bring a lot of people back again and again each week. Farm News headlines, Glenn Shirk's dairy management course and the archives of the Penn State's Dairy and Animal Science Department's columns that run in the paper, have added to the popularity of the site.

Today, we have the Pennsylvania Corn Contest Winners, Accu Weather reports, a featured recipe from Section B, and from time to timet we add the program schedules for various conferences and conventions. Tomorrow, who knows? We'll find other things of interest and educational value as they come and go. And we'll keep updating the weather, recipes and news headlines each week.

In addition, we are pleased to announce that a few advertisers have chosen to place banner ads and display pages on-line with us too. When you visit our site you will want to see the farm equipment, auction, and other ads with products and services that are so much a part of our weekly publications. Of course, you can subscribe to Lancaster Farming by the email hot link, and you can find a short history of our forty-two years.

SO, IF YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO ON-LINE AND WANT A GOOD PLACE TO BOOKMARK, RIDE YOUR MOUSE TO OUR CORN CRIB.

Grassroots Cattle Organization Fights For Fair Price

WASHINGTON, D.C. – "We can't survive without a fair price," said Leo McDonnell Jr., president of the Ranchers-Cattlemen Action Legal Foundation (R-CALF), a national grassroots organization of cattlemen and women.

McDonnell, along with South Dakota auction yard owner Herman Schumacher and business woman Nikki Heier, brought the group's concerns to President Clinton and the United States Senate on Tuesday.

McDonnell, in meetings with President Clinton, Agriculture Secretary Glickman, and U.S. senators, urged the nation's leaders to aggressively confront the economic crisis plaguing the U.S. cattle industry, particularly a it relates to foreign countries dumping and/or subsidizing cattle below production prices in the United States. The Columbus, Mont. rancher noted that the unfair trade practices R-Calf is seeking to halt, if left unchecked, can ultimately destroy the U.S. cattle industry and the communities that depend upon it.

During his testimony before the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, McDonnell said that an unfair price for cattle affects more than just producers. He cited an agricultural bank loan president who told him, If this market depression continues in agriculture another year that 'there will be blood in the streets' from urban businesses that will be going down – it won't be just ranchers and farmers that suffer." He also said "25 percent to 33 percent of ag loans are now 'adversely classified' – this is ridiculous when you consider that the norm of most industries is only 5 percent.

McDonnell, with a small group of western ranchers, formed R-CALF almost a year ago in response to a prolonged depression in cattle prices. The group's greatest concern is imported cattle entering the market at below the cost of production. The organization estimates that such imports are costing the U.S. cattle industry as much as $2 billion per year. In response, R-CALF filed three petitions with the U.S. Department of Commerce seeking action against Canada for subsidizing and dumping cattle below the cost of production and against Mexico for also dumping cattle. On Dec. 22 the department, having found sufficient grounds to proceed, initiated investigations in all three cases.

Nikki Heier, a Lemmon, S.D. retail business manager, echoed the rancher's concerns; "This is not a cycle! This is a vicious and destructive process that needs attention. A farm/ranch woman can't afford to make important purchases, a retailer can't pay her bills, manufacturer in New York doesn't get paid; regional salesmen have no one to sell to; and on it goes. Moreover,the dearth of disposable income is undermining the local and state tax base. If rural America fails, it will ripple throughout our economy."

R-CALF supporters gave solutions to the deepening rural crisis. Herman Schumacher, an auction yard owner from Herried, S.D. called for Congress to support and pass legislation for mandatory price reporting and country of origin meat labeling. Heier called on Senators to support the national Commission on Small Farms recommendations in the 1998 report, "A Time to Act."

McDonnell pushed solutions lawmakers could enact to help U.S. cattle ranchers prosper in the marketplace through fair prices and fair market conditions. Among his requests were more accurate, timely data regarding cattle imports, U.S. actions to ensure greater access to foreign markets by U.S. cattle and beef, special rules addressing the unique needs of the livestock sector is ongoing trade negotiations, and asked that a high priority be given to legislative authority permitting producers to establish "rational marketing structures not only within the United States but also in a regional market" (for example, NAFTA countries).

R-CALF board members say they will continue to actively pursue its legal action and educate the public and lawmakers about conditions in the domestic cattle industry. McDonnell noted that R-CALF has received financial baking from more than 3,5000 ranchers, bankers, main street business and agribusiness firms. General support for R-CALF has grown to more than 130 organizations and 26,000 people signing petitions in support of the R-CALF efforts.

NFU Applauds ITC Recognition That Lamb Imports Hurt U.S. Producers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) applauded a March 26 decision by the International Trade Commission (ITC) to recommend four years of trade restrictions to halt the recent surge of lamb imports to the United States.

The recommendations will now be considered by President Bill Clinton, who has 60 days to modify, approve, or deny the proposals. NFU supports using tariff revenue to provide direct compensation to producers undermined by lamb imports or to reinstate the federal wool program.

The ITC decision is a result of a section 201 trade petition filed last year on behalf of lamb producers across the United States who have seen prices plummet due to heavy imports. NFU wrote the ITC urging support of the petition.

"This decision will in large part determine the future of the lamb and wool industry in the United States," and NFU President Leland Swenson. "Lamb imports have risen sharply over the past 18 months causing a severe crisis in our domestic lamb industry. Due to an influx of imported lamb from Australia and New Zealand, many lamb producers across this country are being squeezed out of business by unduly low prices.

"The case of the lamb industry is a textbook example of the need for improved trade agreements that put the interests of U.S. producers first," Swenson said. "Lamb producers have suffered from a steady erosion in price over the last several years due to loopholes in trade agreements. We strongly support the ITC's decision to slow imports and hope the president will also give strong consideration to the recommendations."

Between 1993 and 1997, the quantity of lamb meat imported to the U.S. increased 47 percent. U.S. Department of Commerce data shows that the volume of imports in 1998 was 30 percent higher than 1997 and 71 percent higher than 1995 levels. At the same time, lamb prices plunged 40 percent from spring 1997 to the end of 1998.

Faddis Concrete Products, Thorndale, PA

SPECIALIZING IN PRE-ENGINEERED STEEL BUILDINGS SINCE 1990

Founded in 1990 and incorporated in 1992, A S HOOVER, INC has grown rapidly for good reasons The corporation has been recognized in two recent issues of a national industry news magazine

WHY A.S. HOOVER, INC. FOR STEEL BUILDINGS?

A. SAFETY! Emphasis on strength, NO BUILDING FROM A.S. HOOVER HAS EVER COLLAPSED!

B. QUALITY AND DESIGN. In addition to commercial, agricultural, and industrial applications including cranes, buildings from HOOVER have met the strict criteria of the National, State, and Township Governments, the School District, and the Philadelphia Airport

C. PRICE! With the most of buildings coming from the lower cost South, and hauled on backhaul, plus a high volume combined with low handling overhead, HOOVER is a leader in cost per ton of steel on the jobsite

D. RELIABILITY! CECO Building Systems, originally Mitchell Buildings is one of the oldest and largest metal building firms The record of Pennsylvania German builders speaks for itself

In short, A S Hoover, Inc brings to the customer via the smaller Plain people contractors, the benefits of a larger organization while maintaining the frugality for which they are noted With concentration on efficiency and workmanship, alcohol, profanity, and blaring radios are not permitted on the job

In addition to the volume with CECO, Dealerships are also held with KIRBY (spans to 40' on 12" purlins) and CORLE (galvanized girt and purlin systems) giving unsurpassed coverage of all applications

Ag Outlook Seminar Offers Producer Insights

JOHN BERRY
Lehigh County
Extension Agent

An Agriculture Outlook Seminar conducted at the Berks County Ag Center early in March featured Jim McCormick, futures specialist with Allendale Inc. McCormick, graduate of Purdue University where he studied agribusiness management, provided some insights into crop futures.

Prior to joining Allendale, McCormick was with soymeal giant Central Soya, where he was a merchandiser. His expertise is in the soycrush, basis markets as well as cash markets.

Also speaking was Gene Gantz, government liaison in Washington, D.C.

Here is a summary of what growers can expect in the next season.

Corn

A major weather problem seems to be the only hope for higher corn prices. Feed demand is expected to decrease this year Current corn supplies are ten percent larger than last year. Add to this the large farmer-stored corn inventory that will have to come to the cash market eventually. Local cash markets have corn at 70 cents below last years price at this time.

Soybeans

Soybeans are feeling the pressure of an excellent crop situation in South America and an old crop carry out that is 200 millions bushels above requirements. Local cash price is nearly $2 below last year. The projection is for a record crop from Brazil and Argentina. Together with the record 1998 United States harvest it's no wonder that the Chicago Board of Trade (CBOT) contract price for November beans is off 25 percent from the beginning of January.

Wheat

Shipping wheat to Russia and decreased plantings in the western states would suggest some strengthening of local winter wheat prices. Any possible price rise will be moderated by the historically-low corn and bean prices.

It's hard not to be in a bad mood as you develop your marketing plans for the approaching harvest. However, there is usually some opportunity to price crops, milk and livestock despite the current price forecast.

Opportunity

The current CBOT price on December 1999 corn is around $2.20. This same corn has traded in the range of $2.92 - $2.35. With current prices at $2.20, that $2.92 looks pretty good. The current bean price on the CBOT for November is $4.90. The range for November beans is $6.80 - $4.90. July wheat has traded from $3.89 - $2.84 and is around $2.93 today.

These price variations have allowed a profit margin for producers, depending on when the 1999 harvest was priced. Recognizing and tracking the factors that affect local cash markets is an important job for successful farmers. Think of the many parts of agricultural production: seed, fertilizer, rent, labor, interest, repair, pesticide, fuel and insurance All of these items cost money. The only part of agricultural production that makes money is marketing.

Skill at marketing your production can be the difference between profit and loss for the year. On March 6, 1999, Jim McCormick with Allendale Research, McHenry, Ill. was at the Berks County Ag Center to present a seminar on the outlook for agriculture and possible marketing strategies. The Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club, Keystone Farm Credit, and Penn State Cooperative Extension developed this educational seminar to benefit regional farmers.

Most of the farmers I talk with lately are asking questions about their marketing opportunities for the 1999 season. Unfortunately, some of the best pricing points might have already occurred. The chance to secure favorable price protection appears limited for those growers that have not already locked in prices. The opposite side of the coin is represented by the livestock farmers that locked in feed prices last fall, only to see better pricing opportunities as the year progresses

Both case illustrate the need to constantly stay informed about relationships in the market. Jim McCormick explained his Managing Risk In Today's Environment" plan. There are five major areas for farmers to consider.

1) Farm for dollars per acre, not dollars per bushel. Can you say "I need $? per acre for my crops."

2) Cover all production and price risk.

3) Aim for total farm performance, not field performance

4) Establish and eliminate risk at preplanting Spring prices are generally best and the field work can be accomplished without undue concern over fall price receipts.

5) Use risk management practices to collateralize operating loans and margin loans

Marketing Agricultural Products

Today's farmer faces a number of marketing alternatives. These alternatives vary in complexity and the amount of knowledge needed. Each farmer has different marketing objectives, financial resources, production systems, and risk tolerance. It is possible to capture a 20-40 cent per bushel advantage using merchandising skill.

Price Forecasting Impossible

No one can predict future prices accurately and consistently. Trying to sell crops or livestock at the peak price can be disastrous A realistic goal would be to sell in the top one third of the price range.

An understanding of the world agricultural balance sheet is necessary when establishing marketing strategy.

REGULATING WATER RETENTION IN POULTRY

Emad Saleh, Ph.D.
Poultry Nutrition
Post-Doctoral Position
Department of Poultry Science

A lawsuit filed by red meat producers in a federal court in Iowa resulted in a ruling finding the regulations permitting poultry to absorb up to 8 percent moisture during processing to be "unlawful because the rulemaking record upon which it was based lacked adequate data to support the specific limitations."

However, a major issue was ignored. Poultry processors use water to meet stringent chilling requirements that are imposed by USDA solely on the poultry industry.

As a result of the court's decision to strike the 8 percent threshold, the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Services (USDA/FSIS) has proposed new regulations limiting the amount of water retained by "raw, single ingredient poultry products as a result of carcass washing, chilling, or other post-slaughter processing." This proposal would restrict the amount of water absorbed and retained to zero percent for single-ingredient, raw, whole, cut-up, or ground poultry carcasses and parts. It would not affect raw products that now "bare complete labeling or nutrition labeling."

However, FSIS acknowledged that it might be difficult to eliminate water retention for poultry products while "continuing to meet food safety requirements." Under this proposed rule, the maximum percentage of retained water that could be present in a product would have to be disclosed on a product label. For example, a label could read "product contains up to__percent absorbed water." Processors that can prove that their products do not retain water would not have to label the products or could include a "no-retained-water" claim on the label.

The proposal will require that any water retention limits greater than zero percent be "established on the basis of sound data." But the agency lacks information on which to base any water retention limit, and thus is unable to determine whether the limits that had been in place are too high.

Instead, the agency is proposing an alternative to the zero percent retained-water requirement. A protocol approved by FSIS for collecting data by the processing establishments was published in December 1998.

In summary, poultry processors now need to collect adequate data to demonstrate that water retention is an unavoidable consequence of the process used to meet a food safety requirement imposed, in the first place, by the agency itself.

Gov. Ridge Announces Counties Eligible For Disaster Aid

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge announced that farmers in McKean, Potter, and Tioga counties are eligible to receive disaster aid for damage to their farms because of snow in early January.

"The heavy snowfalls of early January caused substantial damage and loss to farmers in these counties," Gov. Ridge said. "This declaration will offer much-needed financial relief to those farmers."

The three counties were named as contiguous counties eligible for assistance following the federal designation of portions of Pennsylvania as disaster areas because of weather-related damages.

As a result, family farmers in McKean, Potter, and Tioga counties are eligible to apply for Farm Service Agency emergency loans.

Loan applications will be received through Nov. 9 for severe physical losses in McKean County, and through Oct. 18 for severe physical losses in Potter and Tioga counties. The current interest rate is 3.75 percent.

On Feb. 9, Gov. Ridge announced that farmers in Erie and Warren counties also were eligible for emergency assistance. For these counties, loan applications will be received through Nov. 9 for severe physical losses only. The current interest rate is 3.75 percent.

For more information, farmers are urged to contact their local Farm Service Agency.

Obtaining and recording local cash prices and basis weekly is recommended. One hurdle to clear in this process is mastering the vocabulary of marketing Put, call, strike price, premium, short, long, hedge, weak or strong basis ought to become familiar terms to farmers concerned with effective marketing

Marketing Alternatives

Not all marketing alternatives and their related advantages and disadvantages will meet every producer's needs. A written marketing plan then is updated periodically will greatly aid in making effective decisions. A marketing plan reduces emotional decisions, improves communication with family and creditors, fosters objectivity, and provides a tool by which you can evaluate past marketing decisions.

The producer must consider all costs when marketing. Land rent, storage, and return to the manager are often over looked when determining breakeven prices.

Gene Gantz, formerly with Rain and Hail Crop Insurance and an agricultural lobbyist in Washington, D.C., talked to the group at the Berks Ag Center about using crop insurance to assure a per acre income.

Gantz's presentation, "Manage Risk or Gamble," asked one key question of farmers, "What are you expectations for crop insurance?" There are at least five possibilities.

1) Cover operating expenses, such as, seed, fertilizer and fuel
2) Cover mortgage payments.
3) Assure money for family living expenses.
4) Serve as a market planning foundation.
5) Some individual expectation on your farm.

Gantz felt very strongly that "profit" is not a dirty work. With the cost to plant corn in southeast Pennsylvania at about $20 per acre, how much are you willing to gamble?

Summary

Price received for an entire year's production is more meaningful than price received for a single load. Cash sales, forward contracts, hedges, insurance indemnities, and government payments all contribute to net income

Price is important, but remember, the individual farmer's financial situation, attitude toward risk, and marketing knowledge level should be taken into account when developing a marketing strategy. Skill at marketing your production can be the difference between profit and loss for the year.

Jim McCormick discussed his outlook for agriculture Investment money is flowing into agriculture because of the depressed prices Agricultural processors are in a very strong financial position. Farm incomes could be depressed in the short run. Debt per farm is likely to increase Land values will be declining

All of this adds up to a great opportunity for regional farmers Land is becoming available. Equipment prices are down There is potential for storage space When livestock prices are this low, there's an opportunity to start a livestock enterprise As farmers leave farming, there is a source of experience labor for those still in business.
